SUMMARY.

Russia is reported to have signed peace with the Central Powers.

An unconfirmed report has been received that Lenin has ordered a general demobilisation.

Berlin officially reports that Trotsky declares the war with the Central Powers ended, but that Russia had not signed peace.

Trotsky announces that he has ordered a complete Russian demobilisation on all fronts.

M. Litvinoff, the Bolshevik representative in London, accepts the accuracy of the report as to general demobilisation.

Russia and Austria-Hungary are stated to have agreed to the mutual repatriation of subjects between certain ages.

The Ukraine peace treaty secures the maintenance of pre-war frontiers between Austria and Russia.

The treaty provides for the evacuation of occupied territory and no reparation or indemnities on either side.

The White Guards have possession of three-fourths of Finland, though the Red Guards are very strong.

Field-Marshal Haig reports that in the raid by Australians south-east of Messines 37 prisoners were captured.

The Australians inflicted heavy casualties. It is estimated that the raiders killed 100 Germans.

Hostile artillery is intermittently active south-west of Cambrai. The British batteries effectively engaged enemy parties.

The German Emperor, in a speech at Homburg, declared that he wished to live at peace with his neighbours.

"But," he insisted, "German victory must first be acknowledged, and our troops will gain it under the great Hindenburg."

Reciprocal artillery activity prevailed in the Corbeny-Juvincourt sector, north of the Aisne.

This activity was more marked on the right of the Meuse in the region of Bezonvaux.

A German official message states: English reconnoitring advances led to violent engagements at many points.

Mr. Baker (U.S.A.) expresses the opinion that a big German offensive at several points in the West is imminent.

Germany is strengthening her front with troops from Austria and the Russian front.

There is great dissatisfaction in Austria owing to the despatch of Austrians to the West front.

President Wilson, in replying to the Central Powers, says: "We can never turn back from a course chosen on principle."

"Our armies are rapidly going to the fighting front, and will go more and more rapidly."

"Our whole strength," remarks the President, "will be put into this war of emancipation."

He makes a scathing indictment of the German peace manoeuvres, and says Count Hertling's reply is very confusing.

"What we are striving for," remarks the President, "is a new international order based upon right and justice."

There must be no annexations, no contributions, and no punitive damages.

The British Government has authorised the Zionist Commission to proceed to Palestine to arrange for the repatriation of the Jews.

The British destroyer Boxer has been sunk in the Channel as the result of a collision. One man is missing.

Unemployment, owing to the lack of raw materials, caused serious syndicalist rioting in Copenhagen.

The crowd stormed the Stock Exchange, and injured the brokers. The police interfered, and several persons were wounded.

The Prime Minister delivered an important address to manufacturers in Melbourne on the organisation of trade and industry.

"We must economise production by organisation, as well as by the adoption of modern methods," Mr. Hughes said.

The results of the intermediate certificate examination for boys in the metropolitan district are published to-day.

The heat wave continued at many places in the country yesterday. At Broken Hill the temperature reached 106.

Many people at Broken Hill are prostrated by the intense heat, and there is a good deal of sickness.

The Federal inquiry into the prices of foodstuffs in Sydney was resumed yesterday. Milk, butter, cheese, and bacon were dealt with.

The dairying industry was stated to be prosperous in various districts just now, though it had had a bad time.

Five applications by butchers' employees' unions for registration as industrial unions were made to the Industrial Court.

As the scope of the activities of the applicant unions had not been defined, a conference was arranged.

Mr. J. B. Suttor makes some important suggestions with the view of developing trade between Australia and the East.

To make a success of the business, he says, the marketing of our products must be organised on a large scale.

Dr. W. C. Mackenzie, who arrived in Sydney yesterday, spoke of the progress of curative workshops in the treatment of soldiers.

The work of Australian pathologists at the front, he said, was regarded as equal to similar work in any other country.

The Government Printer gave evidence before the Public Service Commission in regard to the Government Printing Office.

Mr. Gullick said he he regarded the building as very unsuitable, and generally as being out of date.

The secretary of the Electrical Trades Union says there is a sinister influence at work in regard to the shipbuilding agreement.

He considers the unions should do their utmost to secure co-operation in the building of ships without further delay.

Mr. W. F. Dickson, of Broken Hill, has won the Royal Agricultural Society's scholarship at the Hawkesbury College.

The schooner Mahukona has been wrecked on the outer reef at Apia, Samoa.

Invalid soldiers will arrive to-morrow morning overland from Melbourne.

The debate on the second reading of the Gas Act Amendment Bill was proceeded with in the Assembly yesterday.

A robbery, involving the loss of £100, was perpetrated at the Pitt and Bathurst streets branch of the E., S., and A. Bank.

Senator Millen takes some exception to the Primate's remarks on repatriation.

"There is no justification," he says, "for the suggestion that nothing is being done in the matter."

Two railway employees were accidentally killed in the Bathurst locomotive yards. A third man was seriously injured.

The Tramway Union will apply for a writ of mandamus to compel the Tramway Appeal Board to hear certain appeals.

A collision occurred near the entrance to Botany Bay between the coastal steamer Dunmore and the tug Champion.

The impact was a severe one, the Dunmore being so badly damaged that she had to return to port.

An active market ruled for investment stocks yesterday, and a fair volume of business was reported.

Industrial stocks generally were firmer, but lower prices were accepted for War Loan.

The market for mining shares was buoyant. Barriers were strong, and copper propositions, with the exception of Hammonds, advanced.

Westonias were brighter, and the three favourite stocks figured at enhanced prices.

All lines of groceries were inquired for, but parcel business was of the smallest dimensions.

Heavy supplies of eggs were offering in Sussex-street, but prices remained unchanged.

Cheese was plentiful, and the demand showed signs of improvement. Bacon supplies were low.

Steady business was reported in forage and grain lines. Onions were well supplied, and Victorians were in good demand.

Forecast.—Hot and sultry conditions generally, with isolated thunderstorms, and squally northerly wind, quickly giving place to a cool squally southerly change.

This famous strain is the result of seven years' careful hybridising and selecting. It is unique in the Floral world; every Pea has a history and a pedigree, and can only be obtained in this strain throughout Australasia in our own Hildamere Packets.

We wish to caution the Public about buying other than original packets. Each season's seed (even of the same variety) is an improvement on the last on account of continual reselection, and seed bought as Hatchers is not genuine unless in Hildamere Packets. It is either a fraud or out of date.

LEADING GROUND-FLOOR ATTRACTION

TILL THE END OF THE WEEK

AT FARMER'S.

For Two days, delighted lovers of Hand-made Laces have made satisfying purchases of these exceptionally keen values. There are still numerous popular designs left, which we shall continue to sell till the end of the week. They include Hand-made Filets, and those much sought Chefoo Torchons and Clunies, wonderfully woven by the clever fingers of native women—and well known for strength in wearing. These are the last of a large purchase, and we are reducing the prices thus, because we wish to see the end of it.

PITT, MARKET, and GEORGE STREETS.

A WELL-TURNED ANKLE.

Why it is that proud, haughty man will turn his head to admire the maiden with the shapely limbs?

Take a walk around the Block and observe the admiring looks, the maid with the dainty understandings, gets from the "Lords of Creation." It is the same old story at the Footlights and the Fashionable Beach.

In this Land of Sunshine Nature has been kind to her fair Daughters in the gift of pretty and dainty little feet.

Fashion and Convention decree that these precious parts should be encased with suitable Hosiery.

With every shop beseeching you to buy from them, claiming the lowest price, the best dyes, and the largest stocks, it is bewildering to know where to shop.

Suppose you visit that unusual store of Riley's, in Liverpool-street, and see their assortment of useful, and fashionable Hosiery. Perhaps a suggestion or two will assist you.

We have a Black Cotton Hose at 1/3½ per pair. This is a good line for every-day wear.

A very popular Hose is a White Fast Colour Mercerised double sole, high spliced heel, and wide suspender tops. Price, 1/11½ per pair.

The much asked for Light Fawn and Tan Silk Ankle Hose are here. Seamless, spliced heel and toe. Price, 3/3 per pair.

There is one store in Sydney where you can get Fancy and Household Drapery and Furnishings of Unusual design. A most unusual store. It is Riley's, in Liverpool-street.

CORSETS FIRST!

WHY DO WE SAY THAT?

Run over in your mind all the

advertisements you remember, and acknowledge that, when tested, there was a good solid reason behind each of them.

Now we advertise

CORSETS FIRST.

WHY?
Just now feminine thoughts are naturally turning towards the question of the EASTER GOWN.

What with the Show, the Races, and so forth, Sydney will be at its best this Easter, whose early date foreshadows finer than usual weather.

SO THE NEW GOWN IS A QUESTION OF EARLY IMPORTANCE.
And we would persuade you—
CORSETS FIRST.

No matter how modish, how expensive your Easter Gown may be,
FIT, STYLE, AND SATISFACTION DEPEND ENTIRELY UPON THE CORSET.

Select that first. Pick your New Corset with the care and scrutiny you would bestow upon the most elaborate costume; then have every other garment fitted over it, and

YOUR GOWN WILL DO YOU JUSTICE.

HAVE WE A CORSET TO RECOMMEND? We have. Experience in selling, and in after conversation with buyers (a big point, that), assure us that stand for every point the woman of to-day desires.

WARNER'S are so nearly and constantly in touch with the centres of authentic fashion that
"WARNER MODELS"
are always the last word in entirely dependable style. The latest lines of smartness, in the hands of Warner's trained designers, produce those
which the name of
always suggests to the experienced woman.

THE AUTUMN MODELS OF WARNER'S RUST-PROOF CORSETS ARE HERE.
Let us persuade you to an early fitting.
OUR CORSETAIRES
are anxious to answer any inquiries and exhibit any models you may desire to see. Give us a call.
WE DELIVER FREE

THE COME-TO-STAY PHOTOGRAPH.
THE COME-TO-STAY PHOTOGRAPH.

Our latest creation is the greatest of all Photographs. The New Emblo Portrait has come to stay.

It carries all before it, and is better than all the best of the past.

It cannot be approached for ART, STYLE, or EFFECT.

It is chaste in design, harmonious in the blending of complementary tints, and is of distinctive merit.

For Black and White Photos, it is a creation in Greys, while for Sepia Portraits it is a unique blending of buffs, creams, and biscuit tints. Each folder is eminently suited for the particular photo, enclosed therein.

It has a two-flap case enclosing a cut-out mount, delicately Indian tinted with dual tints on a plate mark. The photo, shows the mount with good effect. It is flexible, and will not crack or break in carriage.

NOW SEE THE PRICE.

Bromide Portraits (Engraving Black), beautiful and artistic, 15/6 per dozen, or True Sepia Portraits, 21/ per dozen.

This beautiful creation is worthy of the first place in any collection, it instantly appeals to the artistic taste.

The ruling fashion. If you do not see our window before going elsewhere you are sure to be sorry.

A BEAUTIFUL GIFT PICTURE.

The Emblo is an artistic portrait that will give equal pleasure to the one who gives it and to the one who receives it.

THE ON-VIEW PHOTO.

Not like the ordinary photo, that gets stuffed away, the merit of the "Emblo" will impel a permanent view place in the room.

PALMER CORD TYRES.
PALMER CORD TYRES.

You are PAYING for Palmer Cord Tyres without getting them, in the extra petrol consumed if you use ordinary canvas motor tyres.

Palmer Tyres have a foundation of two transverse layers of cord, each single thread of which is insulated in pure rubber, each cord free to move independently without chafing or heating. That is why they are so flexible.

BUILDING MATERIALS.

A WORD TO THE WISE HOME-BUILDER.

Asbestos Cement Sheets are not all alike in quality, neither are all the different kinds sold at exactly the same price—as some would have you believe.

HARDIE'S
"FIBROLITE" (REG.) CEMENT,
THE AUSTRALIAN ASBESTOS CEMENT SHEETS, are not sold up to a convention-fixed price, but down to the lowest price possible, and COST LESS THAN ANY OTHERS. Therefore, do not be misled into paying more, when you cannot get more quality, strength, or serviceability than "Fibrolite" will give you. "Fibrolite" is impervious to the ravages of time, Rust, Rot, White Ants, and Decay. It is absolutely fire resistant, and for that reason ensures protection of home and furniture against fire.
"Fibrolite" is manufactured by the Asbestos Slate and Sheet Manufacturing Co., Ltd., Camellia, Parramatta River. Write for particulars and samples.

Also ask about—
"FIBRO" CORRUGATED ROOFING—the only roofing of the kind made in Australia.
"FIBRO-C" COLD WATER PAINT—the best substitute for lead paints.
"FIBERLAC" BUILDING BOARD and ASBESTOS WOOD LININGS—for distinctive interiors at low cost.

SWIMMING SCHOOLS.

That the recent swimming schools were a most pronounced success was made evident at the harbour excursion given by the Minister for Education as a wind up to the session. As far as girls are concerned, Miss Gormley has played her part well, and results justify her methods of teaching. To watch the young idea being taught to swim nowadays, or to read of the system, inevitably brings to mind the little poem, "Mother, may I go out to swim?" But it shows how every method is tried now in teaching any subject. Instructors are "out" for results. What suits one child may not suit another, and wisdom is justified of all her children. Consequently, the sight now usual in inland schools of pupils making frog-like kicks, supported the while on a kind of suspended leather apron, is one at which to smile with approval and not with amusement at the funny convulsions of the gymnasts, for this style of dry land swimming has been proved to be most effective in its right element.

Yesterday's paper contained many swimming items, the chief news being the report of the ladies' swimming championship carnival at Glenferrie Baths, Melbourne, when in the world's championship for the 440 yards ladies' race, Miss Fanny Durack broke her own world's record. Again was Miss Mina Wylie second. How many times has this result been chronicled? We are intensely proud that these two great swimmers belong to our State, and both Miss Durack and Miss Wylie must now be rather conscious of the monotony of this statement. For they have been hearing it for years. Miss Beaurepaire, who gives third place to Victoria, was only about a quarter of a minute behind Miss Wylie. So that nobody can object to the truth of the assertion that it was a well-contested race, and Victoria has nothing to be ashamed of in possessing Miss Beaurepaire as her best woman swimmer, even if that lady cannot beat the New South Wales champion.

Tramloads of happy school children, flourishing large towels and minute "neck-to-knees," on their way to any and every swimming bath in and around the metropolis, are an everyday occurrence. The elderly observer, who is, perhaps, a Peter Pan in disguise, has never grown up enough to cease to rejoice that there is a beggarly array of empty benches in some hot, stuffy schoolroom these February afternoons, while the joyful "special" trundles along with its full complement of embryo swimmers, or it is "a sight for sore eyes" to see the serried ranks from Fort-street on their way to the Domain Baths, every girl amongst them fully determined to be the Fanny Durack of the future, and feeling nothing but pity for outback schools, with no harbour to splash about in, nothing but flooded rivers, perhaps, or dangerous, treacherous dams.

The serious side of the picture is seen when we read of such a sad accident as the one that happened at Longreach (Q.) on Sunday, when four out of five schoolgirls were with great difficulty dragged out of the swollen Little Gin Creek by a plucky boy, Bert Seeter, who, however, was unable to reach one girl, Eva Brown; her body was subsequently recovered. None of these girls could swim; had they learned the art, in however primitive a way, they would probably all have been quite safe. More swimming baths for inland towns are a necessary, which will doubtless be supplied in time, but meanwhile it is cheap and easy to learn to swim, and with the magnificent facilities for a practically amphibious life which we possess all along the coast districts, swimming ought to come as naturally to young Australians as it does to piccaninnies and the South Sea Island babies, who can all dog-paddle before they can walk.

YOUR NAVAL CADET.

This year New South Wales sent 17 out of the 36 entrants for the Royal Australian Naval College, and on one of our late rainy cyclonic mornings, at Platform 15, was gathered a familiar group to bid farewell. About a fortnight before, at another platform, there had been another farewell group, to bid God-speed to the second group of midshipmen, who, for King and Empire, left our shores to join the warships of the Grand Fleet. This week there has come a throb of sorrow to the heart of everyone whose thoughts are woven with life at Jervis Bay Naval College, for the news came through of the loss on active service of one of the bravest and best, one of the youngest in his year of the first batch of midshipmen, who left us a year ago. And although we are told that loss is common in these days, it can never reach us thus, when the news comes of the loss of an Australian lad, brave, good, high-minded, with a big world of hope and fame before him, and the ocean, that nursing mother of British seamen, as his pillow.

Although only 13 years old when they leave us to begin this career, they are very decided in their wishes, these boys, who intend to be midshipmen, lieutenants, and some day, perhaps, commander or captain. They leave you just as the ordinary schoolboy leaves, full of hope and interest, and with no regrets, but nevertheless, from the week that term begins, they look forward zealously to the next holiday or "leave."

They will probably be homesick for a time, some in infinitesimal, some in greater, degree, for they enter a service where discipline is exact, and obedience implicit, and where studies are real and earnest. And you, whose boy has chosen this career, if you are not a very wise commonsense mother, if you have shared your boy's hours and life, perhaps more than the average, both at work and play, you will think for a time that your sky has fallen. But you, too, learn quickly, that in days like these, you must do your readjusting. Your boy has to step over the line some day, and if the stepping over came earlier, perhaps, than you would have desired, you remember that we live in days that leave no room for sentiment and dreaming: boys must grow up quickly, the world wants men of character and men of action. There is an old proverb (I fear it belongs to the poet of an enemy race): "Talent is developed in quiet, character in the stream of life." There is no stream of life better calculated to develop character than the life of a big college, amid a crowd of wholesome-minded lads of the same age, with a system of education that provides for spiritual, mental, and physical development, with a margin for open air life and healthy amusement—and this under the sane, wise guidance of men, who understand a boy's life and a boy's needs, perhaps as well as a mother, and without a mother's bias to partiality. The first term of the first year at the R.A.N.C. is the longest term of all, there will never be such a long term again. After that, the weeks, and especially the "leave" weeks, fly all too quickly. For there is so much one would learn of this interesting place, or you, who, a little while ago, knew your boy's life so well, will be left behind as a back number, finding yourself hopelessly ignorant and only serviceable in proportion to your talent for turning out sweets, cakes, etc., or hoarding "specials" in anticipation of those "leave" periods. You will be a little dazed at first when your naval cadet returns concerning the familiar terms of this new vocabulary—reveille is simple, "clink," "rattle," "yoff-yoff," "chow-chow," and "chit," take some explanation. "Four days' nine" or "nine days' four" (pardon the confusion of thought) are recommended cures for matrons. "Poldrit," "snag," "oracle," etc., need footnotes. With difficulty you reconstruct in your mind's eye the new days of the new routine. Then there are the swimming carnivals, the boat races, the football matches, concerts, and "pictures," that come at the end of "studies." You can take a small share in the pleasure of these at second-hand. Mothers of the last entrants who, in the first term of the first year, find that days can be very long, soon learn that the college days are good, wholesome, secure, in every sense of the word.

They fly only too quickly, and sometimes, too, the knowledge of that big world of action ahead brings its tiny grip of fear.

GADGET.

A VOLUNTARY CAFE.

A cafe "with a way of its own" is the establishment run by the women of the Voluntary Workers' Cafe, 51 Elizabeth-street. President, Mrs. H. McIntosh, hon. sec. Mrs. Ellis Gulliver.

"Please add, 'no connection with any other cafe of the same, or very similar, name,'" begs one of the workers. "If you are going to write us up, we should be so grateful if you would make this known, for many of our supplies go to 'another place' by mistake, and vice-versa, some of theirs come here. We are affiliated with the Voluntary Workers' Association, but work independently. We have £1200 in the bank, have built three cottages for returned soldiers or dependents of soldiers, at Merrylands, Parramatta, and Sans Souci, are building three more, and have land (given by Mr. Wm. Moule, father of Mrs. Bissett Amess, one of the committee) to build three or four more, at Arncliffe. We cannot get on with the building, because we cannot get voluntary labour."

All these and many more business details were given on a day when luncheon was in full swing, to the accompaniment of clattering of plates and knives and forks, and the merry lilt of "Chu Chin Chow" played with zest on the piano by Mr. B. Faby, who makes music gratis for lunchers once a week. The lively music and the crowds of pretty girls in their rather fetching uniform, with its frivolous white cap and its fluttering apron strings, all busy with trays and all laughing and chaffing with smiles on their faces, for, of course, customers and waitresses are all friends together, the whole scene makes up a characteristic enterprise of the 1918 model, and gives the impression that it ought to be "produced" as a feature at one of the theatres. There are great possibilities in the "war-time cafe" as a scene in a smart revue. The idea is hereby handed on to any theatrical manager.

Characteristic is the spirit which gives force to the whole enterprise. Underneath all the seeming gaiety and light-heartedness of the luncheon hour there is the solid business instinct, making money for the soldiers all the time.

This is how they manage. The cafe gives the soldier £200, which he must repay in 5/ a week instalments, but without interest. It is found a better plan than giving the money outright, and the repayment is made as easy as possible. All the money now to the cafe's credit comes from the profit on five meals weekly, as they have practically no afternoon tea and no Saturday work. There is also a steady band of constant donors, and the marketing is done each day by Mrs. Amess, who takes a taxi to the markets, the cost of the taxi being defrayed out of the workers' pockets. The waitresses pay for their own luncheons, so that all the profits may go to the good cause. The menu is refined and liberal, and yet the tariff is low for quite a substantial meal. That the Voluntary Workers' Cafe should go on and prosper is no more than workers deserve.

THE LATE MRS. RANKEN.

As a widely-read student of literature and dramatic art, particularly of Shakespeare and Dickens, Mrs. Fanny Ranken, who died at 26 Bayswater-road, Sydney, on Tuesday of last week, was much sought after. She maintained an extensive correspondence on literary subjects, which she used to regard as one of the greatest joys of her life. Her correspondents included Professor Stephen Leacock, of Montreal University, whose charming writings have won world-wide fame. The late G. V. Brooke, whose Shakespearian parts are fondly remembered in Sydney, was a personal friend of Mrs. Ranken. In a letter to a friend not long before her death, she referred to her friendship with the well-known actor thus:—"When I was a child, a religious wave spread over Scotland, and all theatres were closed; but when I was a girl of 15 or so they were re-opened, and, as my folks had been great lovers of the play, I was taken the very first night. The stars were Brooke and Fanny Cathcart, in "The Lady of Lyons," and never shall I forget the charm, which has remained with me to this day. It seems years before, when Brooke was a strolling player with a very homely wardrobe, the people of Ayr (Burns's Ayr) saw his talent and made a great deal of him. In fact, our family doctor gave him a long red cloth cloak he used to wear when called out on cold winter nights. So fine a man was Brooke that he never forgot those past kindnesses, and it was said he always played his best in Ayr. I almost felt as if I had lost someone belonging to me when G. V. Brooke was drowned. I for one would have gone a long way to renew the charm of his talent—genius, we may almost call it."

Mrs. Ranken was one of the oldest members of the Shakespearian Society in Sydney, and also of the Australian Historical Society, whilst she was prominently associated with the Women's Club for some years. Her death will be regretted by a large circle of friends.

MISFIT SOCKS.

For more than three years thousands of people have been busily engaged in knitting socks for the men who are bravely facing danger and discomfort in defence of their country. Most of the socks that are sent to the various comforts depots are beautifully made—a pleasure to see, and, no doubt, to wear. Unfortunately, there are exceptions. Some are so small that it would be impossible for any man to get them on. Others are so large that they would be all in wrinkles inside the boot. These have to be taken to pieces and knitted again, which is a great waste of time. Then there are others with minor defects. First, the tight top, which has to be cut off and the sock finished with a row of crochet. Socks should be cast on loosely, and should measure fifteen inches round the top, but sometimes they hardly measure ten. Knots in the wool have to be cut out and the place darned over. The best way to join wool is to put the ends side by side for two or three inches, and knit together for half a dozen stitches.

Toes are often so hard that they would cause even more pain to the wearer than the knots. They must be undone and finished off with a bodkin, according to the directions that have been given several times in the daily papers. Sometimes thread is worked into the heel to make it last longer, but it is very hard and likely to cause sore feet. Silk or thinner wool answers the same purpose, and does no harm. Knitting socks is not in itself very interesting work, and is generally only undertaken from a wish to help the men who deserve the best of everything we can do for them. How much better, then, would it be to get proper instructions, and make the socks all that can be desired in the first instance. The "Red Cross Knitting Book" gives very good directions for knitting socks, and when they are followed there is no need for any to be knitted twice. We are told that a pair of dry socks puts new heart into a man. As our men have been refused the help they so much need, let us do our best by keeping them supplied with plenty of good socks.

A. V. H.

Some eighteen months or two years ago it was a pleasure to see the enthusiasm of the women and girls on train, tram, or ferry in knitting socks, at least 70 per cent. of them were so engaged, but now, alas, it is an exception to see anyone knitting. May I ask why is this? If some of our men are war weary, but plucky and still carrying on, surely there is no reason for our women to be sock weary. The poor fellows want socks just as bad as every they did; then it's up to the women of Australia to supply them. A soldier would value socks far more if made by relation or friend than the best that could be purchased for him.

SOCKS.

[The sock competitions announced by some of the comforts funds will, no doubt, freshen up this industry.]

Passionfruit jam is excellent and uncommon. The method in which skins are used is not to be recommended, as they give it a peculiar flavour. The fruit should be scooped from shells with a spoon, placed in a saucepan with an equal quantity of water, and boiled slowly until all flesh leaves the seeds. Then strain through a sieve, pressing out all juice. Return to the pan, adding a cup of sugar to each cup of juice with a few of the seeds, just enough to show what it is intended to be. Boil briskly until it will set.

PENELOPE'S WEEKLY NOTES.

WAYS TO AVOID WASTE.

One of the lessons taught to housewives by that stern master, experience, is that one of the first steps that must be taken to avoid waste in the kitchen is to spend money somewhat generously in buying necessary vessels and utensils for storing and keeping, as well as for cooking and serving, food. The housekeeper just beginning her career, is all too apt to overlook this—we may as well give it its true name—necessary.

The cost of the rest of the home furnishings, the myriads of infinitesimal things that have to go into every home, astonishes her. "At anyrate, I can save in the kitchen," she probably tells herself; "no matter how bare that is, no one need be any the wiser." But as time speeds on, she comes to realise the truth, that the elegance and comfort of the drawing-room, and, indeed, of the whole home, depends upon the seemingly insignificant kitchen, and its unromantic equipment. Therein, she comes to know, the household expenditure is controlled, and therein chiefly occur the small leaks that by and by can defraud her home of its grace—so soon as that day dawns when its very existence as a home seems to hang on the process known as "refurbishing."

Just as surely as it is "the little rift within the lute, that by and by will make the music mute," just as surely it is the little leaks within the kitchen that by and by will shake, not only the homes themselves, but—and especially in war time—the nations owning those homes.

Therefore to our task.

Housewives must spend to save—spend on their kitchens. Our American sisters realise this, and concentrate on food, fuel, and labour savers, most admirably.

Electricity over the water, in all the great towns, is the housewife's chosen hand maiden. Here, with us, she is almost universally (except as an illuminant) unknown. Let us hope that "after the war" conditions will make a happy change for us in this. The ice chest, or ice box, should be in every home. From the end of November (often from mid-October) till early in April, ice is an absolute necessary. Granted by all means that it is a luxury, it is still, nevertheless, an absolute necessary, not merely to render food appetising, but to preserve it in any condition at all, and save it from being thrown away.

Therefore, as a first aid to economy in summer time, let us write at the head of our list an ice chest; or if that cannot be afforded, a simple home-made ice-box.

Next in importance must come a good and absolutely fly-and-ant-proof safe. Many housekeepers are neglectful of the safe if they are in possession a of refrigerator, but they cannot afford to be so, for there comes into the summer time of us all, a dire day when the ice has unaccountably dissolved, and the new block tarries long on its way to us—to say nothing of the afternoon and evening of the seventh day, and the early morning of the first—with almost all of us, iceless periods when to confine food in the refrigerator is to ensure all its appetising qualities totally disappearing.

For those who cannot get ice at all a good butter cooler (there are some cheap and excellent ones at all the large stores) cannot be dispensed with. But, like its confrere, the ice chest, it demands unfailing attention, to keep it in condition. A third great aid to economy will be found in the—say in a—fireless cooker, or "hay box." Almost any woman can make one of these for herself—besides which, every kind and variety can be bought, or made to order. So that, according to one's means one can have either the cheap home-made box, costing a couple of shillings, or the elegantly-fitted chest, running into pounds. And the cheap home-made chest can so deliciously cook the food, so effectively save the fuel, and the cook's time, patience and strength that it seems to Penelope a thousand pities one is not to be found in every kitchen in city, suburbs and country. And what next, and fourthly? Penelope would, even write down, seeing that bread is the staff of life, and of all our food that most commonly wasted, two bread crocks—one of fair size to meet the family's needs, and one small, designed to stand handy on a shelf, and to hold the pieces. This latter she has specially found to be a food saver of importance, besides a matter of convenience to the cook.

Let us hasten onwards. Next?—Plenty of air-tight bottles, and tins, and jars with lids. What can be more wasteful than to allow tea, coffee, spices, etc., those foodstuffs whose value lies in their flavour or aroma, to become worthless through being kept in a paper, or in a tin with an ill-fitting lid? Tea and coffee should be in air-tight tins, and be distinctly labelled, and into both tins, along with their contents, should go the teaspoon or measure, used daily. Time, at the last moment, is often wasted in fetching a spoon, unless this is done.

Many housekeepers are weary before they are even half through their task of cooking simply because of the faulty arrangement of their kitchen. It is not unusual to find the store-room at some distance from the kitchen, up or down a step or two, at the end of a passage, or poked away into some odd dark corner. "Ah, if I'd been the architect, I'd have done so and so—or put the store-room here or there," she sighs, as she goes to and fro on her errands for this or that ingredient. Perhaps, she has another plan, and discovers and collects all the ingredients she is likely to press into her service before she commences her cooking task. Or perhaps—oh, rare event—she possesses a kitchen cabinet. You have seen these wonderful cabinets, have you not, pictured on the covers of American magazines? A knob or spring is pressed, back rolls a door, or out swings a wing, and lo a veritable grocer's store is revealed. Here, are all the trays and pans, anyone could desire; there are the mixing bowls, egg whisks, rolling pins, potato beaters, etc.; there is a table, that flap you had not even considered, and there is a picture of a smilingly untired, happy-eyed cook! A cooking cabinet you say, and turn away just assured of one thing—that it is not for you! It were better to study it closely, and to figure out one on a plan of your own. If you never get any nearer to it than a set of home-made shelves and a cupboard in close proximity to your cooking table, you will have left the architect who designed that far-off store room far in the lurch, and you will have added to your home a time and labour saver of great value.

Fruit remains very abundant. Housekeepers are reminded that to-day is, if not the time, to make hay; yet the very hour for the making of blackberry jam and for the preserving of that useful fruit, the China pear. It is better to get in touch with a seller or gatherer in a blackberry district—to-day every district seems to claim that bad eminence, and to order direct. Buying in small amounts when one means to make jam is an expensive mistake. Apples go so excellently with blackberries that it is better to order a case of apples, and to get to work at once. Fruitgrowers will supply apples direct at from 4s a bushel. Pears are somewhat less good than a week ago, but not so the preserving pear. Grapes run from 4d and 6d to 1s per lb. Passionfruit from 2d a dozen. Passionfruit jam is very good. Plums, peaches, and nectarines abound. Rockmelons will never be more abundant, and tomatoes are as plentiful as passionfruit, and 4d, 6d, and 9d a dozen.

Peas are available at 3d to 4d a lb; cabbages at 4d and 6d each. Pumpkins at 1½d per lb, new potatoes (growing older) 2½d a lb, and table corn 3d a cob. All the salad vegetables are good and plentiful.

SOME GOOD IDEAS.

Every careful housewife knows how a back lawn may be cut up by a clothes prop. If jam tins, with the lid cut away of course, are sunk in the ground, two to each prop, this annoyance may be avoided. One tin should be put in the right spot for the prop when down, and the other for the prop when it is pushed up.

A good idea for people who are building with a verandah to the west or north is to have the pieces of iron roofing directly above the windows on that side of the house arranged so they may be removed during the dark winter months and replaced for the hot weather. A house treated in this way commands both sunshine and shade.

Lately I saw in a friend's kitchen a lightly stretched piece of wire fastened to two nails in the wood-work just under the kitchen mantlepiece. Placed behind this wire, held in place by this wire, was a row of brightly polished saucepan lids. The effect was delightful and the lids were in a most convenient position.

A tightly rolled newspaper with a piece of string or tape tied round the centre of it and arranged into a loop makes an excellent coat-hanger; if this is remembered the necessity of taking hangers—which add considerably to the weight of one's luggage—when one travels may be avoided.

HOME AFFAIRS.

SOME DRESS REFORMS.

Would it be correct to call the corset the foundation of the whole structure of a woman's attire? It is something of the sort, and we are beginning to find out that even the so-called tyranny of the corset is fast becoming an anachronism. Without the more or less strongly boned support, such as this garment gives, it is hopeless to attempt that "finished" impression which the well-dressed woman gives. But so varied are our occupations now that different kinds of corsets are worn by workers at different occupations. For instance, it is now found to be impossible to make munitions in the "common or garden" corset, and fashion journals give us illustrations of the new make, which is less rigid, much shorter in the skirt and lower in the bust than that worn for everyday wear. Munition makers do much bending over, and a high bust gives much discomfort.

Until this new occupation came to set us free from this annoyance, we all like sheep—suffered the stab in silence. A too-high bust is a most uncomfortable accessory, but in the ordinary build of corsets, the pressure is felt by nearly every wearer. Tight-lacing is now an unheard of evil. Yet the graceful appearance of a fashionably-dressed woman, who allows her waist to be its normal size, is not at all impaired by the change of cut. At a fashion parade in our city last week, all the mannequins who were displaying the new autumn fashions had slim, rather boyish figures, and this type appears to be the "correct thing" for young and old at present. These two reforms, the abolition of tight lacing and the less rigid adherence to the one unvarying build of corset (no matter how the cut might be varied in its lines to suit different types of figures), have been brought about quite quietly; yet we are none the less conscious of them.

Reform is loudly called for in our shoes and stockings. More and more expensive grow the former, and more and more scarce the latter. The prices of the dainty suede or buckskin white boots and shoes, and the tan and black in suede or satin or enamel kid, are really so inflated as to be quite absurd. A pair of shoes is likely to cost more than the dress that is worn with it nowadays. But a girl to look at all as she would wish to look, simply "must" give at least 32/6 for a ridiculous (but very pretty, be it said) little pair of white buckskin shoes, with toes like pins and heels as high as stilts, or for a demurely-appealing pair of black suede ditto, with plain square brass buckles. With these, and a 15/6 frock of white voile and insertion, which she has "run up" that morning on the sewing machine, and a hat trimmed with nothing but pinned jauntily to one side, and tethered to her face, so to speak, by a wisp of veil, the girl of to-day feels ready to face any crisis. Her stockings indeed should not be forgotten. They are such an important item that the topic of "stockings, opaque or transparent, silk or near silk; with some remarks on rents, and how to mend them," would form the theme of a bulky thesis.

MARTHA.

BLOUSES FOR THE AUTUMN.

A HEROIC WOMAN.

News has just come to hand regarding the funeral of Dr. Elsie Inglis, the founder of the Scottish Women's War Hospitals. The funeral took place in St. Giles's Cathedral, Edinburgh, and was attended by representatives of hospitals, committees of various suffrage societies, the Servian Minister, as representing the King of Servia, and the Crown Prince, members of the Servian medical staff and Servian Relief Fund, and 25 Servian boys, who are pupils at Heriot's School, Edinburgh. At the Dean Cemetery, where the interment took place, the coffin was carried to the graveside by the Servian representatives, and the Rev. Dr. Kelman, St. George's United Free Church, conducted the committal service.

The following message was received from the Queen by Mrs. Shaw Maclaren, sister of Dr. Inglis:—"The Queen desires me to convey to your sister and you an expression of her heartfelt sympathy with you in the great loss you have sustained in the untimely death of Dr. Elsie Inglis. Her Majesty fully realises the useful work performed by your late sister in connection with the Scottish Women's Hospitals, while the splendid services rendered by her to Servia can never be forgotten. The Queen feels for you both very much in your sad bereavement. Yours truly, Edward Wallington."

Writing in the "British Weekly," Lady Frances Balfour says:—"To see her was to love her, and her presence was always to be reckoned upon wherever there was good work to be done for the people. The war made her known in the widest spheres of our far flung battle line. Hers was a cast of countenance which gave promise, amply fulfilled of a pertinacious tenacity and a power of rising above all mundane difficulties. No better comrade ever stood on a platform, facing an audience whom to address was as if speaking into the centre of a pincushion. She handled her subject with a strong thread of argument, enlivened by a smiling humour, and she illustrated the cause for which she spoke by facts drawn from her professional work among women. Her professional work was heavy, but the call of woman's suffrage never got a refusal from her. Her thoughts sprang to mobile hospitals, fully staffed and equipped to serve abroad. She fired the Scottish Federation of Suffrage Societies with her practical vision; they backed her with organisation, and the people of Scotland backed the Scottish women's hospitals for all they were worth in money and gifts. The National Union and London Suffrage Societies followed in her train, and units were equipped and economically financed even in those early years of muddle and waste.

"France was the first to take the generous offer of lives freely given and great treasure bestowed. Skilled colleagues were among the honourable women who went forth under her inspiring and aspiring plans. Here we cannot tell the story of the Scottish women's hospitals in many lands. She was given marks of honour—by every Government, save her own. The people of her love were the Serbs. For them she lived. Along their battle fronts her units laboured. She served them as she loved them, even unto death. Her last message to the London Suffrage Committee was to send out yet another unit, 'For they need them.' As the revolution swept Russia into anarchy, we lost touch with Dr. Inglis and her unit. The authorities said she was safe, and soon it was told she and her unit were coming home. How shall we honour her on her return? was the thought of those who were waiting to welcome her. And nearer the shores of the country that sent her forth came the ship bringing home the dauntless heart that was facing the inevitable parting. 'A few things I should like to have done here, but I pass to wider service.' She knew 'her moorings were cut,' and her loyal obedience heard and submitted to the call. Someone praised her work. 'Not mine, but my unit.'"

Dr. Elsie Inglis started a movement which is now no longer Scottish, as it includes more than six hundred British women, from all parts of the Empire. Dr. Elsie Dalyell, a distinguished graduate of Sydney University, is the bacteriologist at the Royaumont Hospital, France, and the name of Dr. Agnes Bennett, of Neutral Bay, is well known in Servia to-day. There are many other brave Australian women associated with these hospitals.

It is quite evident that aprons are coming into fashion again, and some of the styles are quite dainty. The little black satin affair, which some of us remember worn by our mothers, most of which were worked in crewel-worked flowers, and black lace on the edges, to the light and airy-like style, made from muslin and other light material, which have come into vogue once again. The more frills and fussies to your afternoon apron, the smarter it is. They are easily made, many odd pieces of ribbon and lace can be used for the occasion; and, there is no limit to the number and designs which could be invented. Quite lately I had occasion to help in a bazaar; my stall happened to be a the "Apron Stall." I had quite a variety, all sizes, shapes, and colours. When my sale of "aprons" was finished, I found I had realised the sum of £8. No good housewife should be without one, no matter what kind of work has to be accomplished. Even in the garden, when any kneeling has to be done, it is quite necessary that one should be worn. It is said that Queen Mary is quite fascinated with the apron, and that Royal "pinnies" are charming. In all probability this was a suggestion of Princess Mary (surmises "Mildred").

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

In answer to "J.N.": Grape vinegar can be made by boiling grapes, strain off the juice, and add ½ teaspoonful of tartaric acid to 1qt of the juice.

Peach Vinegar from Parings.—Pour half a cup of molasses on to a jar half filled with the parings, and fill up with water, set in the sun, and strain for use in about two weeks, or as soon as the liquid looks clear. Apples may be used in the same way. The cheapest and best way of making vinegar is to buy the concentrated vinegar, 1 gallon added to 15 gallons of water makes a splendid article. There is no trouble whatever. It is ready for use just after mixing. A.L.R.

Vinegar.—A.B.C., Homebush, sends two recipes:—Mix cider and honey in the proportions of one pound of honey to a gallon of cider, and let it stand in a vessel for some months, and vinegar will be produced so powerful that water must be mixed with it for common use. Another way, take 6 spoonfuls of good spirits of wine, to this add 3 pints of milk, and put the mixture into a vessel to be corked close for one month. Vent must be given from time to time to the gas of fermentation.

Tomato Sauce, "Guyong."—This is a good sauce. Quantities are:—10lb ripe tomatoes, 3lb apples, 1lb sugar, ¼lb salt. Boil these without water to a good pulp. Then strain and put to boil with 1 pint of vinegar, ¼ packet allspice, same amount of ginger, cayenne, and pepper to taste (say one teaspoonful cayenne, one dessertspoonful pepper), one large onion cut in slices, 6 cloves (or less) of garlic. Boil until thick; if the sauce thins on top in the bottle it wants more boiling.

Shortbread.—Plain flour is used. For P.E.G.

The Japanese Language.—Australian Woman: Japanese is taught at some of the schools. You should make enquiries about teachers, etc., at the Consulate.

A ring that causes a sore finger.—Mrs. A.D.: The remedy is quite simple. Do not wear the ring.

Herb growing.—"Herbs:" This subject has been dealt with so often that space can not be spared for it again. No doubt if you call at the Women's Home Industries Shop in Victoria Arcade, Castlereagh-street, or the George-street shop opposite Hunter-street, you will be given the information.

To clean pen paintings when soiled, first put the painting in luke-warm water, and make a good lather with soap; do not rub painting, just shake it about in the water. When clean lay it on about six thicknesses of towelling, and iron with a moderately-heated iron, having the wrong side up to the surface. If you are putting paintings aside for any time you often find they stick. To prevent this, lay a sheet of blotting paper between them.

Under the patronage of the Lieut.-Governor and Lady Cullen, Brigadier-General Lee, the Mayor and Aldermen of Concord, and by permission of the S.W.C., a monster Red Cross carnival will be held on Saturday afternoon and evening, and subsequent week-day evenings, until Wednesday, at St. Luke's Oval, Concord. The whole of the proceeds will go to the Australian branch of the Red Cross Society. Mr. W. G. Slattery is hon. organiser, Misses Cubot and Goddard are hon. secretaries.

Blackberry Jelly.—Place the required quantity of fruit in a preserving pan, crush it and cover well with water. Boil slowly for about 1 hour to extract all juice, strain through a jelly bag, using no pressure, or a quicker way is to first press the juice through a gauze sieve, afterwards allowing it to pass through a jelly bag. Then add crystal sugar in the proportion of 1 cupful to each cup of juice, place in a clean pan, and boil very fast until a little will set when tried.

FROM NEAR AND FAR.

The many friends of Lady Forrest will offer her hearty congratulations on the high honour which has come to her as the wife of Australia's first baron. Lady Forrest, although she has paid several visits to Sydney, is not as familiar a figure here as she is in Melbourne, where her distinguished appearance, happy expression, and genial manner have made for her hosts of friends, and have won much vicarious popularity for her husband. Sir John and Lady Forrest for many years made the Grand Hotel in Spring-street their headquarters when Parliament is sitting, and as this hotel is opposite Federal Parliament House, Lady Forrest has been able to keep in close touch with the life that goes on in those legislative halls. Pleasant, informal little luncheon parties and afternoon teas, as well as dinner parties on a more or less elaborate scale, have been the principal entertainments given (in the days when there was entertaining) by Lady Forrest, who is a great favourite with her own sex.

The death of Miss Sara Derham, one of the founders of the Australian Women's National League, is sympathetically referred to in the February number of the "Woman," the organ of the league. As the first hon. secretary of the A.W.N.L., Miss Derham was associated with the great success which the infant organisation met with almost from its beginning. Janet Lady Clarke was the first president, Mrs. F. G. Hughes, the present president, succeeding to the office on the death of her sister. Miss Derham became subsequently president of the Melbourne East branch, which position she held until her health failed; but she retained the hon. secretaryship to the last. The membership of this important league numbers 54,000, scattered over Victoria and Riverina in more than 500 centres, throughout all of which Miss Sara Derham's was an honoured name. Miss Derham belonged to a well-known family. She was a sister of Mr. F. T. Derham, and an aunt of Miss Enid Derham, a brilliant student and verse writer.

The Minister for Education has approved of the "Sisters' Fund," inaugurated under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A., being brought under the notice of teachers, who are at liberty to assist if willing. According to particulars supplied by the organising secretary, Citizens' Committee of the Y.M.C.A., Miss Mabel Brown, of West Maitland, originated this fund, in her district, with marked success, the object being that sisters and their friends should subscribe one penny per week and upwards, to help their soldier brothers and friends at the front. Mr. Peter Board, in the current number of the "Education Gazette," calls attention to the "Sisters' Fund," and gives it his warm approval.

At the first annual meeting of the Trench Mortar Battery Comforts Fund, held at Bull's-chambers, Moore-street, on February 6, stirring addresses were delivered by Mrs. Mackinnon, Chaplain Wilson, and Corporal Wrixon, a returned T.M.B. soldier. The secretary reported that 578 shirts, 950 socks, and 86 Balaclavas, and 53 underpants had been made, packed and shipped during the year; and that many grateful acknowledgments had been received from the boys at the front. Groceries may now be sent—an appeal is herewith made for gifts of tinned fish and fruit, sugar, tea, rolled oats, and sweets, to be brought to the depot during the next fortnight, to help to fill the 60 cases that the committee hope to get away in that period of time.

Donations of money should be sent to Mrs. R. S. Pearce and Miss Nea Doyle, joint hon. treasurers, 379 Kent-street. Donations in kind should be sent direct to the above address on or before the 26th March, while further supplies would be welcome during the continuance of the Show. GIFT OF A FLAG.

Several months ago the Newcastle and Hunter River division of the Citizens' "War Chest" Fund sent a special Australian flag as a gift to General Birdwood from their branch. Miss Dora Sparke, the hon. organiser of the Newcastle and Hunter River district, has received a letter from Mr. T. S. Woodburn, A.C.F. Commissioner in London, giving the following interesting details of the circumstances under which the presentation was made:—

"Permission was readily granted by General Birdwood to present the flag, and the address accompanying it in the field, and this was accordingly done on the 13th September.

"It was a happy little event, and unique, as far as Australians are concerned in France. A grass plot in front of the General's hut, a few yards in extent held us, whilst a light misty rain drove across the fields beyond us. The General, with his trusted staff round him—signs of war on every side—the never-ceasing roll of guns and traffic, and there you have the scene.

"To us it was a particularly happy thought that you should send this flag. We who have worked in the field know that no one takes a greater interest in the welfare of the Australian troops than General Birdwood, and we regard the flag as an emblem of affinity between him and you dear folk at home, whose devotion has meant so much to the boys who are fighting the good fight for those who may not so serve."

"General Birdwood, who greatly appreciated the gift, suggests that a silver plate, showing the names of famous Australian battles, should be placed on the pole. Shall we arrange to have this done on your behalf?"

The Newcastle and Hunter River branch at once acceded to this request.

A CYCLONE STORY.

Being a native of the Burdekin Delta, which is in the cyclone zone, I had the never-to-be-forgotten experience of living through Sigma and Leonta, the two cyclones with which the Mackay storm has been compared. When Leonta came I was living north of Townsville, where the full force of the cyclone was experienced. When the gale increased, how anxiously we watched the aneroid as its indicator fell lower and lower, showing the near approach of a cyclone! We could do little but trust that our house would hold, and not be blown away over our heads. How the wind whistled and shrieked, and the rain dashed down, or at times was reduced to fine spray, as it was broken up by the fierceness of the gale. We were thankful it was daylight. Sheets of corrugated iron, blown off houses, were carried up high in the air, whirled round like paper, then twisted about topmost branches of trees. The rain stung and blinded one, even on a verandah, so not a soul or an animal would venture outside while the cyclonic wind roared and screamed overhead like hundreds of demons let loose, and we had to shout in each other's ears to make ourselves heard.

"Will the house hold out?" was the question asked with awed voices, as the day advanced and night approached? Somehow one felt safer during the day when at least one could see what was happening, and we were far from neighbours.

The walls of the verandahs were plastered with leaves, while outside huge trees lay uprooted, and the ground was strewn with twigs and branches, which had been completely stripped bare by the great force of the wind.

Tired out with watching the damage done by the fury of the storm, we retired about midnight, only to be awakened about 2 o'clock by a terrific tearing sound, and then a crash like the crack of doom. The roof of our house had been blown off, and had banged down upon that of the only house near us. My sister and I, who shared a room, were out of bed like a shot, as we realised what had happened, and we felt the rain pouring on us through our mosquito nets, as we found that we were prisoners in the room. For the house had been wrenched over a few inches, jamming the door, so that it was impossible to open it. Standing there in our rain-soaked night garments, we pounded and kicked at the door until we heard someone doing the same on the other side of it, when at last, with an axe, the door was broken open, and we were huddled downstairs, leaving the upper part of the house to the mercy of the cyclone, which still shrieked in triumph. What an awful day and night it had been; and with more to follow.

Next morning, on going upstairs, we found total wreckage, and all china and glass smashed to tiny pieces, whilst the water soaked through the floors, saturating everything down below, and necessitating the family sleeping for two nights between blankets so wet that one could wring the water out of them.

The river was running a banker, and flooding all the surrounding district, carrying along on its swollen current logs, whole trees, cattle, horses, wallabies, and pigs.

We stuck stakes in the ground to note how much the river rose each hour, and hoped against hope that we should be spared a flood through our home. But, with relentless cruelty, the brown water rose higher and higher, until it was a foot and a half all through the house, and for as far as we could see, a brown sea of water. That night, with the open sky above us, and the flood underneath, we spread our wet blankets on tables, and, climbing up out of the water, slept thereon. There was too much flood water about for anyone to get to us, and the news reached Townsville that we had been washed away out to sea. Consequently a tender was provisioned and sent a hundred miles to effect a rescue if possible. The reporters on board thought to save time by writing out their description en route; it read like this: "We found the people whom we set out to seek, each of them had climbed a tree to get away from the flood, while underneath each tree was a large alligator with open, smiling jaws waiting until his victims' hold should relax, when the reptile's patience would be rewarded, and his breakfast provided at the same time."

When the reporters rowed across our garden and lawn in their boat from the steamer and found us lively and well, sitting on the table enjoying our lunch of boiled fowl and rice, they altered their report, adding: "This is what we expected to find, but this is what we did find," and then they gave the less sensational facts.

But somehow we are not hankering after any more cyclones.

MELBOURNE NOTES.

Mr. F. C. Clarke, Minister for Lands and Immigration, stated recently that he would encourage the immigration of suitable young women for domestic service. Without displacing anybody or reducing remuneration, there would be room for 5000 domestic assistants. When munition works ceased, he thought young women would be disposed to emigrate to Australia. Mr. Bowser, the Premier, said that he favoured giving assisted passages to soldiers' wives (who have become the wives of Victorian soldiers in England) to the extent that berths were available on ships coming here. At present, there was no authentic information as to the number of Victorian soldiers who had married in England.

The baby clinic movement began in a modest way in the suburb of Richmond. Dr. Isie Younger-Ross, Mrs. Hemphill, and other enthusiasts, raised money from private sources. So well have they justified themselves, that recently, when the above-named ladies formed a deputation to the Chief Secretary, he gave them a cheque for £125, and promised £250 per annum, to help the movement. Public sympathy with the movement is developing strongly. Several well-known artists recently assisted at a musical evening, and a sum of £20 was raised.

In response to requests recently made by patriotic workers, that an effort should be made to secure knitting wool for the making of soldiers' garments at a reduced rate, the Chief Prices Commissioner has cabled the High Commissioner in London, asking him to use his endeavours to obtain cheaper supplies. Mr. Fisher approached Messrs. Patons, the manufacturers, but they were unable to accede to the request. It is probable that arrangements will be made to secure supplies through the High Commissioner's Office by agreement with the Board of Wool Control.

Mrs. Arthur Cowley, secretary of the Victorian Neglected Children's Aid Society, is leaving here to join her husband, who is engaged in Red Cross work in England. Mrs. Cowley has been promised a position in one of the munition factories. For some years this lady has done valuable social welfare work in connection with the children's home, Parkville.

Definite Reasons for "Beale" Piano Excellence.

Swift, deft work! That's what is needed in glueing in hammers. Being so close together each one must be placed in position quickly—yet accurately—so that the hot glue will make a permanent, sound joint. We have found by experience that the light, supple fingers of girls do this operation best. They possess the delicate touch and sense of careful attention to detail which is essential to the kind of work we demand—and so women are the specialists in this branch of the trade.

Control of all the processes in the manufacture of an article—from raw material to finished product—assures uniformity of excellence and a reasonableness of price obtainable in no other way.

Each process in the manufacture of "Beale" Pianos and Player-Pianos is conducted in works owned or directly controlled by this organisation. The firm dresses its own timber, cuts veneers, casts iron parts, etc., etc.

Isn't it reasonable to assume that such opportunities for personal supervision must result in a perfect article?

THE BOROUGH TREASURER.

BY J. S. FLETCHER.

[ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.]

Brereton waved the proffered document aside and got up from his chair.

"No, thank you, Mr. Pett," he said. "I've no desire to see Mr. Kitely's will. I quite accept all that you say about it. You, as a lawyer, know very well that whatever I asked Miss Pett this morning was asked in the interests of my client. No—you can put the will away as far as I'm concerned. You've assured me that Miss Pett is as yet in ignorance of its contents, and—I take your word. I think, however, that Miss Pett won't be exactly surprised."

"Oh, I daresay my aunt has a pretty good idea, Mr. Brereton," agreed Pett, who, having offered the will to both Bent and the superintendent, only to meet with a polite refusal from each, now put it back in his bag. "We all of us have some little idea which quarter the wind's in, you know, sir, in these cases. Of course, Kitely, deceased, had no relatives Mr. Brereton; in fact, so far as Miss Pett and self are aware, beyond ourselves, he'd no friends."

"I was going to ask you a somewhat pertinent question, Mr. Pett," said Brereton. "Quite an informal one, you know. Do you think he had any enemies?"

Pett put his long white fingers together and inclined his head to one side. His slit of a mouth opened slightly, and his queer teeth showed themselves in a sly grin.

"Just so!" he said. "Of course, I take your meaning, Mr. Brereton. Naturally, you'd think that a man of his profession wouuld make enemies. No doubt there must be a good many persons who'd have been glad—had he still been alive—to have had their knives into him. Oh, yes! But—unfortunately, I don't know of 'em, sir."

"Never heard him speak of anybody who was likely to cherish revenge, eh?" asked Brereton.

"Never, sir! Kitely, deceased," remarked Pett, meditatively, "was not given to talking of his professional achievements. I happen to know that he was concerned in some important cases in his time—but he rarely, if ever, mentioned them to me. In fact, I may say, gentlemen," he continued in a palpable burst of confidence, "I may say, between ourselves, that I'd had the honour of Mr. K.'s acquaintance for some time before ever I knew what his line of business had been! Fact!"

"A close man, eh?" asked Brereton.

"One of the very closest," replied Pett. "Yes, you may say that, sir."

"Not likely to let things out, I suppose?" continued Brereton.

"No more than—than the Spinks is!" said Pett. "Not he! He was a regular old steel trap, Kitely was—shut tight!"

"And—I suppose you've no theory, no idea of your own about his murder?" asked Brereton, who was watching the little man closely. "Have you formed any ideas or theories?"

Pett half-closed his eyes as he turned them on his questioner.

"Too early!" he replied with a shake of his head. "Much too early. I shall—in due course. Meantime, there's another little commission I have to discharge, and I may as well do it at once. There are two or three trifling bequests in this will, gentlemen—one of 'em's to you, Mr. Bent. It wasn't in the original will—that was made before Kitely came to these parts. It's in a codicil—made when I came down here a few weeks ago, on the only visit I ever paid to the old gentleman. He desired, in case of his death, to leave you something—said you'd been very friendly with him."

"Very good of him, I'm sure," said Bent, with a glance of surprise. "I'm rather astonished to hear of it, though."

"Oh, it's nothing much," remarked Pett, with a laugh as he drew from the brief bag what looked like an old quarto account book, fastened by a brass clasp. "It's a scrap-book that the old man kept—a sort of album in which he pasted up all sorts of odds and ends. He thought you'd find 'em interesting. And knowing of this bequest, sir, I thought I'd bring the book down. You might just give me a formal receipt for its delivery, Mr. Bent."

Bent took his curious legacy and led Mr. Pett away to a writing desk to dictate a form of receipt. And as they turned away, the superintendent signed to Brereton to step into a corner of the room with him.

"You know what you said about that electric torch notion this afternoon, sir?" he whispered. "Well, after you left me, I just made an inquiry—absolutely secret, you know—myself. I went to Rellit, the ironmonger—I knew that if such things had ever come into the town it 'ud be through him, for he's the only man that's at all up-to-date. And—I heard more than I expected to hear!"

"What?" asked Brereton.

"I think there may be something in what you said," answered the superintendent. "But, listen here—Rellit says he'd swear a solemn oath that nobody but himself ever sold an electric torch in Highmarket. And he's only sold to three persons—to the Vicar's son, to Mr. Mallalieu, and to Jack Harborough!"

CHAPTER XII.

PARENTAL ANXIETY.

For a moment Brereton and the superintendent looked at each other in silence. Then Bent got up from his desk at the other side of the room, and he and the little solicitor came towards them.

"Keep that to yourself, then," muttered Brereton. "We'll talk of it later. It may be of importance."

"Well, there's this much to bear in mind," whispered the superintendent, drawing back a little with an eye on the others. "Nothing of that sort was found on your client! And he'd been out all night. That's worth considering—from his standpoint, Mr. Brereton."

Brereton nodded his assent and turned away with another warning glance. And presently Pett and the superintendent went off, and Bent dropped into his easy chair with a laugh.

"Queer sort of unexpected legacy!" he said. "I wonder if the old man really thought I should be interested in his scrap-book?"

"There may be a great deal that's interesting in it," remarked Brereton, with a glance at the book, which Bent had laid aside on top of a bookcase. "Take care of it. Well, what did you think of Mr. Christopher Pett?"

"Cool hand, I should say," answered Bent. "But—what did you think of him?"

"Oh, I've met Mr. Christopher Pett's sort before," said Brereton, drily. "The Dodson and Fogg type of legal practitioner is by no means extinct. I should much like to know a good deal more about his various dealings with Kitely. We shall see and hear more about them, however—later on. For the present there are—other matters."

He changed the subject then—to something utterly apart from the murder and its mystery. For the one topic which filled his own mind was also the very one which he could not discuss with Bent. Had Cotherstone, had Mallalieu anything to do with Kitely's death? That question was beginning to engross all his attention; he thought more about it than about his schemes for a successful defence of Harborough, well knowing that his best way of proving Harborough's innocence lay in establishing another man's guilt.

"One would give a good deal," he said to himself as he went to bed that night, "if one could get a moment's look into Cotherstone's mind—or into Mallalieu's either! For I'll swear that these two know something—possibly congratulating themselves that it will never be known to anybody else."

If Brereton could have looked into the minds of either of the partners at this particular juncture he would have found much opportunity for thought and reflection of a curious nature. For both were keeping a double watch—on the course of events on the one hand; on each other, on the other hand. They watched the police court proceedings against Harborough and saw with infinite relief that nothing transpired which seemed inimical to themselves. They watched the proceedings at the inquest held on Kitely; they, too, yielded nothing that could attract attention in the way they dreaded. When several days had gone by and the police investigations seemed to have settled down into a concentrated purpose against the suspected man, both Mallalieu and Cotherstone believed themselves safe from discovery—their joint secret appeared to be well buried with the old detective. But the secret was keenly and vividly alive in their own hearts, and when Mallalieu faced the truth he knew that he suspected Cotherstone, and when Cotherstone put things squarely to himself he knew that he suspected Mallalieu. And the two men got to eying each other furtively, and to addressing each other curtly, and when they happened to be alone there was a heavy atmosphere of mutual dislike and suspicion between them.

A THEATRE CASE.

Before Mr. Smithers, S.M., at the Central Police Court yesterday, John Alfred Moir, a clerk, was charged with having used threatening language to Edward Christie, a commissionaire, in the vestibule of Her Majesty's Theatre on Monday night.

Mr. George Matheson, business manager at Her Majesty's, stated that about half-past 7 on Monday night defendant complained about having to sit near the back of the reserved stalls. As the other seats had been reserved, defendant was told that he could have his money back. After receiving his money at the pay-box defendant went away.

Edward Christie, employed as a commissionaire at Her Majesty's, said that defendant returned to the vestibule of the theatre after he had caused a disturbance in the stalls over his seats. When told that he would not be allowed to enter defendant said he would knock witness's head off.

Defendant, in his evidence, said that when he returned to the vestibule from the street the commissionaire told him that he would not be allowed to enter the theatre, as he had already caused a disturbance. In reply to a threat by the commissionaire, he said he would knock his head off.

The magistrate imposed a fine of 40s, with costs.

LAW REPORT.

IN EQUITY.

(Before the Chief Judge, Mr. Justice Street.)

WHEAT CROP DISPUTE.

Norman v Bush.

This was a motion to continue an interim injunction granted ex parte recently by his Honor to restrain the defendant, John Bush, from dealing with certain wheat crops in which the plaintiff, Thomas Norman, claimed an interest under an agreement between the parties. The crop in question was grown near Corowa. The plaintiff alleged that in consideration of certain advances made by him on behalf of the defendant, the latter had covenanted to divide the proceeds of the wheat crop equally with the plaintiff. The defendant, it was alleged had interfered with the plaintiff's rights and repudiated the agreement. For the defence it was contended that the plaintiff had removed his horses, and the defendant was compelled to get other horses in order to convey the crop to market.

After consultation between counsel, his Honor, by consent, made the following order: The defendant is to harvest and bag the wheat as hitherto, and deliver it to the plaintiff for carriage to the Government agent at Oaklands. The wheat is to be lodged in the joint names of the parties unless the defendant had entered into a binding contract for the cartage in which case this contract is to be adhered to. The necessary expenses of harvesting, bagging, and cartage, if any, are to be defrayed by a sale of a sufficient number of the certificates for the wheat. The plaintiff undertakes not to deal otherwise with the wheat or the certificates. Costs to be costs in the cause, with liberty to apply.

Mr. Claude Weston, instructed by Messrs. McDonell and Moffitt (Sydney agents for Mr. W. H. Edmondson, of Corowa), appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. R. K. Manning, instructed by Messrs. Pigott and Stinson (Sydney agents for Mr. W. M. Strong, of Corowa) for the defendant.

IN BANKRUPTCY.

(Before the Registrar.)

CREDITORS' PETITION.

Re Louis Sellick, of Meadowbank, Mandamah, Ariah Park, farmer; ex parte John Ainslie Paton, trading as Paton, Burns, and Co., of 75 York-street, Sydney; and Alban George Henry, Right Hon. Lord Aldenham, Hon. Vicary Gibbs, Hon. Gerald Henry Beresford Gibbs, John Arthur Gibbs, Brien Cockayne, Francis Ambeor Keating, George Frederick Peil, James Edward Hayne, Alfred William Meeks, Alfred Ernest Bright, George Montagu Merivale, and Robert Charles Reed, trading as Gibbs, Bright, and Co., of 37 Pitt-street, Sydney. Petition to be heard on the 22nd inst.

DISTRICT COURT.

(Before Judge Backhouse.)

Henry James Dawkins, of 38 Victoria-street, North Sydney, packer, claimed £200 compensation from Thomas Williams, of Beaconsfield-parade, Lindfield, packer, for alleged assault, whereby the plaintiff was severely injured. The defendant paid £5 into Court in satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim, and at the same time he denied liability. Mr. D. S. Edwards, instructed by Messrs. Dawson, Waldron, and Glover, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. S. Mack, instructed by Messrs. Minter, Simpson, and Co., for the defendant.

His Honor gave the plaintiff a verdict for £50, including the amount paid into Court.

INDUSTRIAL ARBITRATION COURT.

(Before Judge Rolin.)

BUTCHERS UNIONS.

FIVE REGISTRATION APPLICATIONS.

The following applications by butchers employees' trades unions for registration as industrial unions were brought before his Honor:—Riverstone Meat Industry Union, represented by Mr. H. E. Manning (instructed by Messrs. Norton, Smith, and Co.), and opposed by Mr. Cantor (Messrs. Cecil A. Coghlan, and Co.), on behalf of the Meat Workers' Union, New South Wales. Mr. Manning also appeared in support of the application of the Carcase Butchers' Carters, which Mr. Cantor opposed. Mr. Manning also appeared for the Slaughter-house Employees (applicants), and Mr. Cantor to oppose. Mr. C. N. Boyce (Messrs. Boyce and Magney) applied on behalf of the Butchers' Shop Employees, for registration, and Mr. Cantor to oppose. The Meat Workers' Union of New South Wales, represented by Mr. Cantor, applied for registration, which Mr. Manning and Mr. Boyce opposed, the latter so far as the application conflicted with that of the Butchers Shop Employees' Union.

When the applications had been stated, his Honor said he supposed that there had been a meat employees' union whose registration had been cancelled. It was stated, in reply, that the cancelled registration was that of the Australasian Meat Industry Employees' Union.

Mr. Manning said that there had been several suggestions for a conference about the applications. The parties wish to meet and discuss matters, especially those in which the scope of the activities of the applicant unions had not been completely defined.

His Honor (to Mr. Cantor): What about your union (the Meat Workers), is it the old union under an alias?

Mr. Cantor: No. The registration of the old union had been cancelled. The union which he now represented came into existence as a branch of a Federal union registered under a Commonwealth Industrial Act. Mr. Cantor added that the application of the union he represented was to be attacked, but his contention was that his union was not at all connected with the old organisation.

By consent, the applications stood over, for a conference between the parties, till Thursday, the 21st inst.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

(Before Judge Docker and Juries.)

(Mr. Herbert Harris, Crown Prosecutor.)

Cecil Thorne Dorrian, for whom Mr. J. W. Abigail appeared, was charged with embezzling at Sydney on December 1, 1917, whilst in the employ of the British Imperial Oil Company, Limited, the sum of £1761. The accused pleaded guilty to embezzling the sum of £214. The Crown accepted the plea, and he was remanded for sentence.

William Henry Cash and Harry Mitchell were charged with having on December 14 stolen 1394 galvanised elbows, 32 tees, and four galvanised sockets, the property of Stewart and Lloyd's (Australia), Ltd. There was a second count of receiving. Cash, who was represented by Mr. J. W. Abigail, pleaded not guilty, and Mitchell pleaded guilty to the second count. Mr. Abigail submitted that there was no corroborative evidence that Cash was an accomplice of Mitchell's, and his Honor concurred. Without leaving the box the jury acquitted Cash on both counts, and he was thereupon discharged. Mitchell was remanded for sentence.

Stella Verne, for whom Mr. W. J. Abigail appeared, was found guilty of having at Sydney, on December 20, stolen one bag and the sum of £14 from the person of John Plummer. Accused was remanded for sentence.

Timothy Ryan was acquitted of a charge of breaking and entering the counting-house of Walter Gardner, at Sydney, on December 4, and stealing 24 tins, containing paint, and two tins containing gold size, the property of Walter Gardner. There was a second count of receiving. Mr. W. D. McMahon appeared for the accused.

ON THE LAND.

TRAINING SOLDIER SETTLERS.

The views of the Primate of Australia regarding the need for special provision, on new lines, for the training of returned soldiers who desire to settle on the land represent a feeling that is growing stronger. When we tackle the repatriation problem in all earnestness, if we ever do, and realise its intricacies, there must be a greater recognition of the fact that a body of men have to be handled, many of whom become somewhat abnormal. It may be found, probably, as Dr. Wright says, that it will require a soldier to deal with soldiers in a way they understand. How far is that principle to be recognised? This question requires an answer. It is of the utmost importance. Dr. Wright proposes training farms under military discipline, with men in charge who have seen service in the war. Is this practicable? Will sufficient ex-service men capable of taking charge of the farms be available? On the other hand, the Minister for Lands, who is responsible for this work in this State, has taken action to secure the co-operation of the farmers and graziers in the training of the men. The latter are being asked to give preference to returned soldiers, the idea being that they should put in 12 months, or some such period, learning farming before they started on their own account. The co-operation asked for will be secured in the majority of cases, but the main point to consider at this juncture is which is the soundest principle. Dr. Wright advocates keeping the men together under military management; Mr. Ashford proposes distributing them on private farms. Certainly if the reasons prompting the first proposal are sound, the other would be a serious step. Hence the necessity for this question being more fully considered and discussed from all standpoints. The complaint is that there has been too much talk and too little done, yet it is still evident there is want of agreement upon fundamental issues. There is agreement, of course, as to the need of training the men in farming; and, therefore, the Government might consider the advisability of utilising some of the present demonstration farms for that purpose. We recently drew attention to the need for an alteration in regard to these farms. They are not necessary, yet are costing the country a large sum of money. If the public knew exactly what they have cost the result would probably be a vigorous protest against a continuance of the present system, in favour of greater attention to sounder agricultural education. The farms could, of course, be sold; but under present conditions it should be wiser to utilise them as training farms for returned soldiers. The Government already possesses them, and, to that extent, expenditure necessary for acquiring other properties could be obviated, while the equipment for training the future settlers is in existence in most cases. Presumably it would be necessary to transfer the farms from the Department of Agriculture to the Soldiers' Settlements Branch of the Department of Lands, or it might be to the Federal Government; but, as far as the community is concerned, the position would be the same. Apart from the bearing upon the problem of repatriation, the utilisation of the demonstration farms for the purpose suggested would mean they were serving a more useful purpose as a medium of agricultural education than in the past.

PASTORAL MATTERS.

At the fortnightly meeting of the executive committee of the Graziers' Association of New South Wales, when the following members were present—Messrs. B. B. Allen (in the chair), and W. H. Armstrong, J. B. Cramsie, O. E. Friend, and John Mackay—advice was received that a member had been summoned for an alleged breach of the station hands' award, and arrangements were made for a full defence. The case is set down for hearing at Melbourne on February 26.

It was decided to endeavour to arrange for an early deputation to the Prime Minister or the Federal Treasurer in regard to the Federal tax on leaseholds.

Consideration was given to the State Industrial Arbitration Bill, particularly with regard to the value of "keep" and "allowances," and it was decided to submit the matter to an early meeting of the Producers' Association's central council.

The secretary reported that the application for exemption of "handy men" from the Farriers' and Coachmakers' State awards will be heard on February 18, and arrangements are being made to secure witnesses.

It was decided to submit to the Stock Board's Council of Advice a suggestion received from a member that where an owner digs out rabbits to the satisfaction of the P.P. Board his neighbours be compelled to dig out and clear up around boundary fences to width of not less than two chains. Fifty-seven new members were admitted to membership, representing 137,331 sheep and 6733 cattle, and five resignations of membership, mainly through disposal of properties, were accepted, representing 14,536 sheep and 230 cattle.

R.A.S. SCHOLARSHIP.

The examination for the Royal Agricultural Society scholarship at the Hawkesbury College has been carried out, and the successful student is Mr. W. F. Dickson, of Broken Hill, who made a very fine record in the examination. This was the first time in the history of the Hawkesbury College that all the candidates sat for an examination. They numbered 46, and the final selection was limited to three. These students were examined by the board for physical qualifications, and Mr. Dickson was accepted. He is the holder of intermediate and leaving certificates, and is regarded as an extremely promising student in agriculture.

THE SHEEP-FLY.

Mr. William Smith, of Currabubula, writes:—If Mr. Froggatt is under the impression that I asked any question re the chalcid wasp stinging animals, to the detriment of the work of the blowfly committee, etc., he has made a sad mistake, and jumped at conclusions. I asked the question because I have frequently heard people discussing the chalcid wasp and inquiring as to whether it can sting; such must be expected, as hundreds of pastoralists (perhaps thousands) have never read the bulletin, so I decided, in the interest of the public, to clear the matter up as much as possible by asking the questions. The reply has cleared the matter up, and if I wish to ask any questions of vital interest to Australia, I shall do so per medium of your valuable column, and if people jump at conclusions I cannot be held responsible for that.

SERIOUS POSITION.

WAGGA.—A discovery has been made in the Wagga railway yards which is causing consternation. A farmer who had weighed some of his wheat on the farm afterwards took a load on to the official bridge before stacking the wheat with the pool agents. Not being satisfied with the weight recorded he challenged the weighing, but was not allowed to supervise the operations in the weigh-room. Later he took a waggon load over the Murrumbidgee Milling Company's weigh-bridge and then the railway bridge, when a discrepancy of 2cwt. 1qr. was revealed, the railway bridge being this amount light in weight. On the matter being reported an inspection was made, and the railway bridge is described as being in a shockingly neglected state. As a considerable quantity of wheat has already passed over the bridge, and as the tests since made indicate similar shortages in loads, the total represents a serious loss to farmers, and the matter is one that requires immediate rectification.

TIME-PAYMENT FOR STOCK.

CASINO.—A meeting of the Richmond River District Council of the Primary Producers' union recommend that the Government be approached with a view to having its pure-bred stock for sale made available to farmers to purchase on the instalment system.

PART OF STATE FOREST.

CASINO.—At a large meeting of the Richmond District Council of the Primary Producers' Union, held at Kyogle, Mr. R. W. Simes said the people of Lismore wished to settle soldiers on the Clarence State Forest Reserve, which forms part of the water supply of the area of Lismore. The Lismore Council was approached with regard to land not within the catchment area, but refused co-operation, alleging that land within the catchment area was sought. This was denied by Mr. Simes, who stated the land required was miles away. A motion was carried that the meeting heartily approved of the action of the Lismore branch in endeavouring to have part of the Dunoon State Forest made available for farm areas for returned soldiers.

REAPER-THRESHER HEADER.

CULCAIRN.—Much interest has been taken lately by farmers in an experimental reaper-thresher header at work on Messrs. Jennings' farm, near Culcairn. This farm was selected because it was overrun with thistles, yet this machine took them clean with an eight-foot cut, the thistles going clean through the drum, there being no stops, no choking, and the wheat running all the time into the box. The machine was pulled comfortably by six horses, and runs with a nice, even swing, and will be a boon to farmers on dirty land where thistles are bad.

BUILDINGS AND WORKS.

THE BURNSIDE HOMES.

Although it is but a few years since a commencement was made with the work of building the Burnside Homes at Parramatta, on the land given by Colonel Sir James Burns, splendid progress has been made. Five homes, each accommodating about 30 children, have been erected. The administrative block, and a hospital are included in the completed buildings. The homes are in the cottage form of housing. From an architectural viewpoint they are attractive, and although in different designs they are grouped in a manner pleasing to the eye.

The first three homes, together with the administration block, were paid for by public subscription, but the whole undertaking was conducted on such excellent lines, as to appeal to the wealthy Scots, and several have decided to give cottage homes. Sir Samuel M'Caughey erected home No. 4, which is an attractive and roomy cottage, with every comfort and convenience. Home No. 5 was built at the expense of the Highland Society. Miss Margaret Harris then came forward and generously decided to pay for the erection and completion of a very fine hospital, which she also fully equipped. The committee of management then decided to erect Home No. 6, which is now in course of construction. This will complete the whole of the buildings on the land first given by Colonel Sir James Burns. But Sir James is so impressed with the good work done by the committee in housing and caring for 190 orphans, that he has given another large area of land on the opposite side of the Pennant Hills-road for an extension of the work. The result has been that other citizens have generously offered to erect homes. Plans are out for Home No. 7, which is to be erected by Dr. and Mrs. Robertson. This home is to be known as Clan Donnachaidh. The building, which will harmonise with those already built, has been designed in the Scotch baronial style of architecture, which will have a most pleasing effect. No. 8 Home is also to be built at once. This home is the gift of Mrs. S. M'Gaw, of Manly. It will also provide for 30 children, with the basement of the building fitted as a play shed. There are at present about 30 children waiting for admission, and these additional homes will provide the accommodation required.

The committee of management was anxious to provide a hall for entertainments and other gatherings, and Mr. F. G. Sargood generously came to the rescue, and tenders are now called for the erection of a first-class hall, costing several thousand pounds, and providing seating accommodation for 500 persons. Mr. Sargood is meeting the whole of the cost of erecting this building. Several other citizens are considering the question of undertaking a big share of the work of building up these Scottish orphans' homes, so that Burnside ere long will, it is expected, carry on a very important work. Messrs. M'Credie and Anderson are the architects for the whole of the buildings except the M'Gaw home and the Sargood hall. These are to be erected from designs by Mr. H. Joseland, architect.

CLEMENTS TONIC LTD.

"I have been residing in Bondi Junction for a period of 19 years.

"I am as well-known as an old resident can be. There is not a business man in Bondi whom I do not know, and who does not know me.

"I have filled the important trustworthy position of night watchman to the leading business people of Bondi Junction for 19 years. I am also a special constable at Bondi.

"The position is one that it has a very trying effect on one's nerves at night, and recently I have had grave signs of nervous breakdown and ill-health.

"I tried many remedies and sources of advertised aid trying to get my nerves right, but I failed.

"Clements Tonic was recommended to me by one who had used it, and I agreed to try it.

"I took several bottles and am now well. Weak nerves, bad rest by day, poor appetite, are now things of the past.

"I follow my work at night without the slightest nerve tension.

"I recommend it to everyone. I would like to know, too, where there is a better medicine.

"I am, Gentlemen,
"(Signed) F. W. SIMMONDS."

THE PRESIDENT TO CONGRESS.

Even if the United States had as yet given no material assistance to the Allies, American intervention would already have proved itself to be of inestimable value through the statements and addresses of President Wilson, the latest of which is published this morning. His own ability, the patience with which he led his countrymen into war, his position as the elected head of a great people, combine to give him the attention of great numbers of men and women in the Allied countries. The disinterestedness of the United States has checked the German propagandists and given his words a commanding authority among all the belligerent Governments. His speeches are, therefore, especially welcome at a time when the strain of war is severely testing the spirit of each of the combatants and when Germans are seeking with renewed diligence to divide one ally from another. His reasoned eloquence brings back the attention of multitudes to the ideals which first excited their enthusiasm and demanded their sacrifices against Germany. He is uninfluenced either by the weariness of those who have forgotten the difference between the character and aims of the Allies and those of the Central Powers or by the callousness of others who have accepted the horrors of war as part of the routine of their daily lives. This latest address is said to be an attempt to drive a wedge between Germany and Austria, as if President Wilson had adopted the clumsy methods of successive German Chancellors. The speech is really part of a series, and has two objects, one special and the other general. The general object is to reassert the principle which runs through every statement of the aims of the alliance; the special object is to answer Count Hertling. The outstanding feature of Count Hertling's speech was his refusal to negotiate with the Allies as a body. He professed openly his intention of doing what German statesmen have constantly attempted to do in secret. He would discuss French territory with France, Russian territory with Russia, the return of German colonies with Great Britain, the Power which holds them and is most deeply committed to fight for the restoration of Belgium. Count Hertling's speech was obviously designed to tempt one Power to leave the others. He invited each of the Allies to break the Treaty of London, and to do so while yet an advantage might be gained at the expense of its co-signatories. Germany would then bargain with the deserter for the control of annexed or occupied territories without regard to the wishes of their respective inhabitants. President Wilson does not trouble to expose a manoeuvre which would enable the Germans under cover of negotiations for peace to separate the Allies and then deal with them separately. But the main thesis of his speech is intended to show how deeply such a method of negotiation would be opposed to the main purpose with which America entered the war, the establishment of a universal and permanent peace. He might have referred to previous congresses to show how the German Chancellor's manoeuvre had availed to break up an alliance in the past. He is satisfied to remind his audience of the Congress of Vienna, when statesmen thought that they could ensure peace by disposing of nationalities without their consent, and at which they sowed the seeds of the wars which have oppressed Europe ever since.

This speech does not repeat the detailed statement of the terms comprised in his general formula which the President addressed to Congress last January. Those terms are obviously included in the summary published to-day. They were the means intended to secure the end for which the American people entered the war—the independence of all nations alike, the freedom of individuals from external domination, the relief of the world from the burden of military preparation, the abolition of sources of provocation, and the provision of safeguards to prevent lawlessness among nations. Since the President has expressly reasserted the national aims he has implicitly bound himself to adopt the same means. This speech, however, lays further emphasis on the unwillingness of the American people to interfere with the internal government of the belligerents or to be a party to any annexations of territory. The President gives German statesmen no excuse for declaring that the Fatherland is in danger, or that the Allies desire to keep Germany in a state of perpetual poverty. He insists again and again that the object of the United States is to prepare an order of government in which every country must participate, and that the negotiations must take place before all the belligerents. This war has taught us that an injustice to one country may throw the whole world into darkness. It follows that every country is interested in each detail of the settlement, and that no item can be allowed to stand which suits the interests of two nations only. This speech, more than any of President Wilson's, proclaims his desire to negotiate. The Allies will put aside everything which is not absolutely essential. They will not stand on any dogma of method or on such instances of childish barbarity as the claim of the Emperor and his Chancellor to say that the German armies are victorious. But having made their offer the American people will continue to prosecute the war with all their remarkable energy, and with every sacrifice of life or money or material. Their desire to end the war will not cause them to delay their efforts for a minute. The President repeats the assurance of which his conduct has convinced the whole world. The Americans came into the war because they saw that the future of humanity was imperilled, and because they believed that neither peace nor freedom could be safe without their help. They will remain in the war, and will fight with all their strength until they are convinced that their sacrifice is no longer needed. It is as true now as it was a year ago, that consistently with the principles that gave them birth they can do no other.

GAS LEGISLATION.

There are two classes of people concerned very specially in the proposed amendment of the Gas Act who will watch developments in Parliament with anxious attention. Consumers of gas in the metropolitan area, and those who have invested money in the shares of the Australian Gaslight Company, are more directly concerned than anybody else; and while the former are afraid of an advance in the price of gas, the latter are already experiencing serious loss of income through the company's failure to pay the usual dividend. When the Legislative Assembly went into committee last week to consider the expediency of introducing a bill to extend the company's powers of borrowing so as to place its finances on a reasonable footing, the Opposition made a lengthened protest. Little was said, and apparently less thought, about the plight of those who had been deprived of their incomes; but attacks were concentrated upon the company as a monopoly. It was practically declared to be a capitalistic vampire. Although the facts show that money cannot be borrowed at the rate prescribed by the Act, and that consequently a large number of connections to new houses and so forth through the area served by the company cannot be made, Labour members insisted that no case for consideration had been made out. It was the same wholesale denunciation of a monopoly as Parliament was treated to before the war when the Gas Act now sought to be amended was passed. But one goes back further to the attempt of a Labour Government to pass an income tax which was to act like a high explosive upon shareholders of large companies; and it was assumed, without any offer of evidence, that such concerns as the Australian Gaslight Company were owned by wealthy men and represented what Oliver Wendell Holmes wittily called "the green stage of millionism"—like mouldy cheese. When the Legislative Council had to deal with this piece of strange public finance Mr. Ashton rose in his place and dissected the lists of shareholders in the four or five principal large companies taken as most fully coming under the Legislative limelight and to be specially aimed at. To the consternation of Ministers it was shown that the vast majority of shareholders in each of the companies was made up of small people, and the "fat man" was inconspicuous in proportion. That is to say, the incidence of the proposed tax would be cruelly heavy upon men and women who clearly were not intended to be hit, and that a serious injustice would be done. The effect of Mr. Ashton's speech was remarkable. The Government asked the Council to pass the bill, as the year was then closing, on the distinct understanding that substantial amendments would be made after the new year. The Ministerial promise was kept; and the incident stands out in our Parliamentary records as an illustration of the valour of ignorance. Is the present Opposition in the Legislative Assembly to be challenged on the same grounds? Mr. Storey and his friends can hardly forget that much small capital has been invested in gas shares by people who have sought security rather than large interest, and they are now being severely penalised by the exigencies of war.

The consumers of gas, no doubt, greatly outnumber the shareholders in the Gas Company. They are largely made up, too, of people on wages and with small incomes; and in these difficult days of rising prices any increase in the cost of fuel and light becomes a matter of moment. It is in their interest that the Opposition is making such play with a question which, after all, should be capable of settlement by temperate debate. Certainly reckless statements are going to help nobody. Either it is true or it is false that the company is in difficulties owing to the war. Wages have steadily risen, the cost of coal, oil, machinery, and much else has gone up so that there promises to be a deadlock unless gas consumers bear part of the burden. But, as Mr. Beeby explained last night, no increase in price can be made until authorised by a Judge of the Supreme Court by whom inquiry must be made. This is provided in the Gas Act of 1912, passed by a Labour Government. The consumer, however, comes in under another guise. Undoubtedly many property owners are being heavily penalised by their inability to connect with the gas mains. Reticulation can only be extended with borrowed money, and money cannot be obtained except at rates higher than the Gas Act allows. We know what the State Government itself has to pay for accommodation to-day, and interest rates are rising all the time. Gas consumers must see that even a monopoly has its limits under these conditions. But it is argued that much profit has been made in the past and wealthy shareholders do exist among so many smaller folk who live on their dividends. Moreover, large sums have been written off or tucked away—so the challenge runs. This the Government proposes to control under the amending legislation. Mr. Beeby's speech last night was perfectly clear on these points. We hold no brief for the Gas Company, and we certainly have sympathy with those who are finding it difficult to make ends meet in these strenuous times. The Minister assured the Legislative Assembly that the Government was perfectly satisfied that a case for relief had been made out; and it is impossible to believe that the Cabinet would help any monopoly for the sake of doing so. Popularity does not lie that way. It was urged last week, in the debate preceding the first reading of the amending gas bill, that assurances are worth very little when monopolies like the Sydney Ferries Company can get relief and then proceed to buy out other companies at large figures. But the Sydney Ferries Company is not controlled by special legislation; the Australian Gaslight Company is tied up at every point, and is now to be still further regulated. It surely cannot be contended with any reason that there shall be no extension of business. The Gas Company must extend its services and keep faith with the public. It was established to meet rising demands with larger supplies; and in the present crisis half the difficulty has arisen because extensions have been stopped. But the whole case is capable of support or disproof by reasonable investigation. The attacks made upon the Gas Company have been based upon prejudice and unreason; and the public must look at the facts as they are being presented with ordinary common sense. War has created the emergency. Is relief to be given in a multitude of other cases—with the evidence of need—and to be denied in this case?

CABINET TROUBLES.

CRISIS DISAPPEARING.

WHEAT ELEVATOR CONTRACT ADJUSTED.

It is now generally admitted that the clear ventilation of the troubles which have divided members of the State Government recently has saved the State National Administration from disruption. It is also believed that a salutary lesson has been taught members of the Ministry, that it is an extremely dangerous policy to attempt to hide important developments which vitally affect the public interest.

Ministers met again in a Cabinet meeting yesterday morning, when one of the two matters which had seriously divided the Government was satisfactorily settled. This was the contract for the central wheat elevator in connection with the system for the bulk handling of wheat, and the necessary silos attached thereto. It was learned yesterday that a grievous omission of certain safeguards which had been insisted upon when the contracts were being considered some months ago had been made. Just who is responsible for the omission has not been disclosed, but, doubtless, this matter will receive attention at the hands of the Government in the near future. So vital were these safeguards considered by two or three members of the Ministry that there can be no doubt that if they had not been eventually inserted in the contract the Cabinet would have been very seriously split. But it was discovered that the contract had not been irrevocably completed, and it was announced last night that the desires of several Ministers that the recommendations of the Chief Railway Commissioner should be rigidly adhered to had been quite satisfactorily met.

It transpired that Mr. Beeby had actually sent in his resignation to the Premier, giving this matter as his sole reason. The Minister for Labour and Industry last night said that he was now quite satisfied, and that he had withdrawn his resignation.

PRIVATE MONEY RAILWAYS.

There was no opportunity for the Cabinet yesterday to consider further its general attitude on the question for the construction of certain country lines of railway out of money lent to the Government by people interested in the building of the lines. This matter is to be dealt with again at another meeting of the Cabinet later on in the week, when it is believed the Government will lay down some general principle which it intends to follow in all such proposals which may come before it. So far as this matter is concerned, it still stands where it was on Monday, with the exception that Ministers have talked in an informal way over the whole proposition, and there now appears to be every prospect that an agreement satisfactory to the members of the Government will be arrived at.

It is believed that the Cabinet as a body will disavow any desire to put the principle into anything like general practice. Whether it will continue to entertain any further suggestions of a like character depends altogether upon the deliberations of Ministers in the next Cabinet meeting. There is still reason for saying, however, that unless the principle is generally discarded, there will be further trouble with one or two Ministers. It is believed, however, that the case against the principle of building railways in this way has been so clearly put that there is very little prospect of further suggestions of a like character being seriously entertained.

MR. BEEBY'S POSITION.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Beeby stated his position. He made it clear that so far as he was concerned the trouble in the Cabinet arose entirely over the contract for the construction of the wheat elevator and silos. "I have always held very strong views on the letting of important contracts," he said. "I have always urged that where large sums of public money are involved, the actual terms of the contract, outside the ordinary routine of the Works Department, should be settled by the Cabinet. In connection with the wheat elevator scheme a number of contracts of an unusual nature had to be considered, and a definite arrangement was made as to the terms of the contract relating to the terminal elevator. A contract, however, was signed which did not embody the agreement arrived at in Cabinet, and I, with other of my colleagues, regarded the question as of vital importance. To-day, however, the contract was remedied in the direction asked, and I am satisfied that the whole of this work, under the supervision of the Chief Commissioner for Railway, will now be properly provided for, and that the public interest will be fully protected."

The Cabinet will probably meet again on Thursday or Friday.

MR. HOLMAN EXPLAINS.

"The misunderstanding to which I referred last night," said the Premier, "was entirely cleared up to-day. I do not feel justified in going closely into details about the episode, which is now happily closed, but its particular features are these:—When some time ago the Cabinet finished its deliberations upon the question of the elevator contract it was decided that certain steps should be taken in order to secure the carrying out of the Cabinet's decisions. It was discovered towards the end of last week that these steps were not being taken, and that there had been a very considerable departure in this connection from the determination arrived at by the Cabinet. This gave rise during a period of 48 hours to a very considerable misunderstanding between Ministers, and a situation which gave me a good deal of anxiety arose. Fuller information and a frank interchange between my colleagues cleared up the misunderstanding completely, and Ministers are now unanimously in agreement that literal effect is now being given to the original decision arrived at in the Cabinet.

"The difference of opinion about the railway construction contracts, which has also obtained publicity, has not yet been settled. This is a point which is reserved for further discussion in the Cabinet this week, but nothing which can be described as a crisis has occurred in connection with it. It is a pure question of policy, upon which we shall arrive at an early decision."

DERELICT SIGHTED.

REPORTED AT SAN FRANCISCO

Captain Polson, master of the schooner Cecilia Ludden, reported on his arrival at San Francisco that whilst on the voyage from Levuka, Fiji, to San Francisco, he sighted a derelict with a mast showing above water.

The derelict was sighted by the Cecelia Ludden on December 19, in latitude 20 degrees, 14 minutes north, and longitude 174 degrees 10 minutes west. Captain Polson sailed as close to the wreck as possible, but was unable to determine her identity.

There are several sailing vessels overdue from San Francisco, and all of these were in the South Seas. The schooner Eocore sailed from a Columbia port in last May for Sydney, and the barque Beluga left San Francisco about the same date for Sydney. Neither vessel has since been reported, and they have both been posted missing.

ORGANISATION.

WHEN WAR ENDS.

MR. HUGHES REPEATS HIS SCHEME.

GERMANY'S GREAT PLANS.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes) delivered an important address on the organisation of trade and industry to members of the Chamber of Manufactures at the Athenaeum Hall to-night. Mr. Hughes stated that the Ministry had already approved the scheme which he outlined and was prepared to put it into operation at once. If, however, the commercial and industrial people of Australia did not want the scheme it would not be forced upon them. In the course of a speech he said:—

"The necessity for organisation has already been fully demonstrated in this war. When war broke out Germany was organised industrially and nationally for peace and for war, or rather for economic and commercial war as well as for war commonly so called. It is no exaggeration to say, as things were going, in another 10 years organised Germany would have wrested the trade supremacy of the world from the hands of unorganised Britain, reduced Russia and Italy to economic servitude, and bestrode the commercial world like a Colossus. It is not too much to say that decisive victory by the Empire and its Allies would be an almost barren thing unless, before the day of victory, the organisation for the new order, economic, social, and political, was firmly established. Despite many protestations to the contrary there are on every hand indications of colossal preparation for the commercial struggle which will follow closely on the heels of peace. The issues at stake will be as great. The danger that now threatens us is that we shall be found as unprepared for peace as we were for war. Germany, on the other hand, is bountifully equipped and fully prepared for this coming struggle. Whatever may be the decision of the god of battles she will have her millions back at the factories long before Britain. One fact stands out above all else, that however triumphant Britain may be in arms, her future lies in a pre-eminence in world industries. Through it she will rise as an Empire or sink to a second-rate nation. Germany's preparations for peace are comparable only to her preparations for war. In October, 1914, a commission was apointed in Germany to work up plans for handling economic affairs during the period of transition from war to peace. The commission and advisory board now sitting contain the leading business men, economists, and statesmen of the German Empire. Under the direction of the commission a large and competent staff is now working out the various problems that must be faced in that connection. The problems include that of labour highly complicated by the withdrawal, death, and maiming of large number of the normal labour supply, and the substitution of women, children, and other former non-producers, and those of demobilisation, trade-union agreements, wages and standards of living, preservation of an exchange rate as favourable as possible, centralisation of the control of the importation of raw materials, and the use of State resources to support credit, particularly with reference to the financing of imports of raw materials. There is no doubt that the German Government and the German people realise that organisations, necessary before the war, will be ten times more so after the war. If it is necessary for Germany still further to perfect her organisation, how much more necessary is it that we, who before the war were unorganised, should act without delay. Throughout industrial Germany the air resounds with preparations. The great system of organisation of manufacturers in all lines, of economists, of engineers and other professional men, of chambers of commerce, and other local organisations, is alive with preparations for the future. The manufacturers in every industry are taking all possible steps to safeguard and forward their individual and collective interests in view of after-the-war competition. All the chambers of commerce and other local organisations are taking steps to safeguard the interests of the particular local communities in Berlin, Hamburg, Bremen, Lubeck, Stettin, and other centres of trade. Import associations have been organised to work with the Imperial commissions in planning and executing the after-the-war programme. The difficulties and details are infinite, but the most painstaking care is being devoted to settling them. No single phase of the great problem is being overlooked for the restoration of the German mercantile marine. A bill has recently passed the Reichstag, receiving the votes of all parties except the Socialists, granting a maximum sum of £100,000,000. The bill, as finally passed, provides that for ships built within four years after peace the Government will grant between 50 and 70 per cent. of the difference between the "normal" cost of building at that time and the "normal" peace time cost of building, while for vessels completed between five and nine years after peace the grant is between 25 per cent. and 50 per cent. of this difference. It is interesting to note also that the University of Berlin in 1916 offered no less than 94 courses of study especially referred to as "preparing for commerce and industry." There were in the curriculum specialised courses in "world trade," commercial geography (a large number of courses covering Europe in detail), and courses in all languages. These facts clearly indicate the extent and thoroughness of Germany's trade preparation. What is not so generally known is that during the war several of the large industries of the country have been "compulsorily syndicated" under pressure by the German Government. The single concerns have been compelled to put themselves under the control of central boards in order that the best use might be made of the limited material, and to effect all possible economies in production. It is reasonably certain that these syndicates will outlive hostilities; that, in short, Germany will come out of the war even better equipped in the matter of organisation for international competition than when she entered it.

How can we in Australia hope to face the future unorganised? How many firms are there in Australia now who could face a sudden declaration of peace and the problems of adjustment with equanimity? We must organise. Two things are necessary if we want to meet the conditions which peace will impose upon us. We must economise production by organisation—by the adoption of up-to-date machinery and modern methods. We must secure our home markets and develop our oversea trade. It is obvious, of course, that we must look to the oversea market to take the bulk of our primary product, and as time passes more and more of our manufactured products also. It is clear that no scheme of organisation for developing our export trade will or can be successful unless it covers every step of production and distribution. We cannot expect individual Australian firms to do all that is necessary to meet the conditions which will exist after the war, but organised into industries and backed by the five millions of Australian people they can do much. We must at last realise that the old methods must go. The days when commercial progress was regarded by individual firms lobbying for a sectional tariff are over. Business must now be done on a national scale, and as such is entitled to receive national aid. But it is quite obvious that no scheme of organisation can succeed without the co-operation of Labour. It is equally obvious that the effective organisation of industry is as essential to the welfare of Labour as it is to that of capital. Unless there is a regular and sufficient demand for goods there cannot be a regular and sufficient demand for labour. It would be well for the leaders of Labour in this country to recognise that the fate which threatens industry at the conclusion of this war is a deadly menace to Labour. It is essential that all parties in this country should be convinced that their interests are interdependent and inseparable, and that any injustice to the one must in the long run inevitably react upon the other. The industries of the Commonwealth, primary and secondary, must be organised from the field and factory to the market. The organisation must be very thorough. It must rest upon a solid foundation. It must proceed on business lines; it must enlist the aid of science. It must have adequate financial backing, and it must be supported by the weight of the whole community. Both labour and capital must co-operate heartily for this great and pressing national purpose, and every individual citizen must be made to realise that this is his business, and that upon its success depends his present and future welfare. Let me now indicate the lines I think a scheme of organisation suited to our circumstances should take:—

(1) The unit of the scheme will be the association representing each industry—primary and secondary. This will be composed of all the producers or manufacturers of an industry forming themselves into an association.

(2) There will be a general council of commerce and industry, composed of representatives from the various associations.

(3) There will be a Department of Commerce and Industry, and a Minister for Commerce and Industry. A first-class business man will be appointed as permanent head of this department. There will be joined with him other experts representing primary and secondary industries.

(4) The Science and Industry Bureau placed on a permanent basis, and thoroughly equipped and staffed will be an integral part of the organisation, and be at the disposal of the Department of Commerce and Industry, and of the various industrial associations.

(5) Trade representatives will be appointed in the principal oversea markets.

I do not hesitate to say that with proper organisation we can increase the output of the primary and secondary industries very substantially. We can rapidly increase our export trade. We can place industry on a firm basis by an organisation which will aid the individual producer to increase his output, find him markets for his product, and ensure transport at reasonable rates thereto. And in this way we shall reduce the burden imposed upon us by this great war, rapidly develop our resources, find regular employment for our people at high wages, and attract large numbers of the right kind of immigrants. The war has brought to us, as to all the nations of the earth, many and grave responsibilities. We must be prepared to shoulder them. We have not only to produce more wealth to pay for the war, and to develop this our glorious heritage, but we have to hold it for the Empire and for our descendants. But there is something greater. That far-flung domain known as the British Empire produces every mineral known to man and every variety of the animal and vegetable kingdoms. Its wealth is uncountable, its resources illimitable. Organised it can control the world; unorganised it must fall a victim to a more efficient nation, and its wealth pass through divers channels to alien lands. A deep and lasting obligation rests upon all the dominions to play well their part in this great plan of national organisation, without which we are undone. Inexorable circumstances, patriotism, and common prudence alike compel us to adopt such a policy as will at once develop our resources, increase our production, and ensure our national safety.

Horace Crotty, on the eve of his departure as a chaplain for the front. The Vicar-General (Archdeacon D'Arcy Irvine) presided, and Mr. A. J. Willgoss (clergyman's warden), on behalf of the congregation, presented Mr. Crotty with a cheque. Presentations were also made by the Sanctuary Guild and by the choir boys.

REPATRIATION.

MINISTER REPLIES TO PRIMATE.

SOUND SCHEME TO BE LAUNCHED.

The Minister for Repatriation, Senator E. D. Millen, took the opportunity yesterday evening, before leaving for Melbourne, to reply to the remarks of the Primate of Australia, Archbishop Wright, concerning repatriation, which were published in yesterday's "Herald."

"With all due respect to the Primate, I feel I must take exception to his comments of yesterday on the subject of repatriation," said the Minister. "He states that the Commonwealth Government seems to be playing with this immense problem. I regret that before committing himself to an expression of this view Dr. Wright did not make himself acquainted with what is being done. That he has not done so is shown by the suggestions which he submits as being essential to a proper handling of this undoubtedly big and complex Commonwealth responsibility.

"The Primate suggests a board of control to include commercial men, and men of military experience gained in this war. Such a board—the Repatriation Commission—has already been created, and has been for some little time at work shaping the many beneficial activities designed for the benefit of the returned soldier.

"The Primate also suggests that men who seek an agricultural career, should be given an opportunity of passing through training schools. This also has been provided for under the agreement entered into between the Commonwealth and the States.

"It is generally admitted that of all our problems," continued Senator Millen, "repatriation must inevitably prove not only one of the biggest but one of the most difficult. Our initial efforts—those launched when the repatriation trustees were first appointed—have failed, largely because they were launched with insufficient consideration and too little preparation. There was about them that very 'hand-to-mouth' system which rightly the Primate condemns. I do not desire, but on the contrary, am resolved, as far as I can, that there shall be no repetition of that experience. I am quite aware of the natural desire of the community to see the new scheme launched, but I believe that even at the expense of some delay, it is better to evolve a sound scheme than to launch one containing within itself the elements of early confusion and ultimate collapse. There is no justification for the suggestion that nothing is being done in the matter. The fact is, repatriation is not one problem but many, embracing the care, treatment, training, and settling in life of all sorts and conditions of men, and requiring for the discharge of this work an effective organisation spread over the whole continent, and involving, at many points, close co-operation with the State Governments, with trades unions and with employers' associations. This work is approaching completion, and in a very short while it will be possible to set the new machinery in motion. I anticipate, with some confidence, that when the new scheme is inaugurated it will be held to have warranted the time involved in its preparation.

SOUTH AUSTRALIAN LOAN.

ADELAIDE, Tuesday.

During his recent visit to Melbourne the Premier, Mr. Peake, met the Governor of the Commonwealth Bank with reference to the flotation of a redemption loan of about £1,500,000, which is due in a few months.

ARBITRATION BILL.

UNIONS KICK AGAINST THE PRICKS.

Perhaps it is only natural that the memory of the disaster of a strike that failed should warp the judgment of prominent union representatives with regard to fresh arbitration proposals. It is easy to understand that those who suffered defeat in the comparatively recent test of strength between union organisation and the general public convenience, plus the weight of public opinion, should look with suspicion on new legislation introduced by those who had so much to do with the successful fight against union tyranny. It would be very foolish for the Premier or Mr. Beeby or any of their Ministerial colleagues to fail to appreciate this first difficulty with which they are confronted in setting out to enact what, in their idea, a model arbitration bill should be. There is abundant evidence that they do not fail in this respect. But when that point is conceded, it is due to the union representatives to admit that something more than mere suspicion of the motives of the authors of the legislation is necessary to convince the public that there is anything wrong about it.

So far as the criticisms already expressed have gone, it is difficult to see any really valid objection, apart from these suspicions. So obvious was this failure to drop mere suspicion and get down to concrete facts, that it became necessary for Mr. Beeby to remind one member of the Legislative Assembly last week that, although he might not be able to grasp it, it is still possible for legislation to be introduced into that House inspired only by the purest motives for the general well-being. The new bill does not sail under any false colours. It frankly declares itself to be a measure calculated to prevent strikes, and it sets out to provide machinery to prove to the people who have become prone to go on strike that that policy shows them no profit, but makes for their undoing. That settles one point. Those who still pin their faith to the strike will not like this bill. They will not be prepared to accept any one of its provisions, because from beginning to end the bill is an anti-strike measure. But before those who take this attitude can command the respect of those whom they profess to represent they will be expected to defend whatever virtues they still see in the strike, and to prove that it is a weapon which benefits the wage-earner by and large. Most people are prepared to listen to any such attempt at justification of the strike, except perhaps only those who know to their bitter sorrow that the strike has brought them nothing but industrial chaos and temporary destitution.

Increased output and continuity of employment are the two essentials for the betterment of the conditions of the wage-earners. All else depend upon them. Better wages, increased comforts, higher social status—all these things have at least a reasonable chance of following upon continuous employment and increased output. Without them none of these things so eminently desired by the community at large can possibly result. It is impossible to apply the epithet "enemy of the worker" to any man or any measure that can bring these things appreciably nearer realisation. Yet that is the deliberate, unqualified aim of the measure under discussion. But none of this is intended to say that discussion should be in any way curbed, or that criticism should be in any way stifled. The views and experience of those who are wage-earners in the ordinary sense of the term themselves, or of those who live in the atmosphere of the wage-earner, will be of the greatest possible value to the deliberations on the measure. Without them it could hardly be claimed that it had a reasonable chance of meeting the needs which have made its introduction imperative. At the same time it must be remembered that neither the unions outside nor the members of the Opposition inside the House have a monopoly of experience of the workers, or of a genuine sympathy with them and their aspirations.

If the suggestions of opposition which have been already made are analysed it will be found that they object to the bill in toto. That is clearly a mistake. Moreover, it is a direct contradiction of the essential idea of Parliament. The bill cannot be entirely wrong. Arbitration is now an accepted principle. If the system proposed in this bill is no good, then it is the duty of those who say so to point out in what respect it is wrong, and to suggest its betterment. So far no attempt has been made to do so. In order to examine the objections the bill may be readily divided into four sections:—(1) Its insistence upon unions deciding deliberately whether they are for or against the use of the strike. (2) The provision insisting upon 14 days' notice of the intention to strike. (3) The liability of union funds to satisfy penalties for breaches of the law. And (4) The elaborate system devised for the submission of matters in dispute to local conciliation committees.

What valid objection can there be to any or all of these? Union representatives will not say openly that they want the liberty to make the fullest use of arbitration machinery while its decisions are favourable to them, at the same time reserving the right, without punishment, to strike when they like. To state that would be to state an impossible ground of debate. Then it has been suggested that the 14 days' notice is intended to give strikebreaking forces an opportunity to get to work to frustrate any attempt to hold up the industrial life of the community. But is it not just as easy to hold that the provision is designed to give full opportunity for the play of conciliatory forces? For many years now every strike has been settled on terms that might easily have been arrived at before the actual disruption of industry if there had been reasonable opportunity for conciliation. It is absurd to suggest that strike-breaking forces can be got together in 14 days. As a matter of fact, no strike can be broken unless the great weight of popular opinion is against it. And whenever that is the case, the strike is foredoomed to failure.

The last point is the most important. In all industrial troubles it is necessary to get right back to the genesis of the disturbance before it can be hoped to settle the differences which exist. The conciliation machinery that is now provided will enable the trouble to be handled from the start. The unions will have adequate representation on these local conciliation committees. Under this system it should be well nigh impossible for the point of view of the workers to be misrepresented or misunderstood, and that has always been held to be the chief trouble in the settlement of disputes. "If we could only get our point of view put before the people," union leaders have said over and over again, "we are sure they would recognise the justice of our claim." Well, here is the very best way of ensuring that proper understanding. It is difficult to appreciate the opposition of the unions to these main provisions of the bill.

In all probability, as the bill goes through the various stages of debate in Parliament, there will be found places in which the spirit of the measure can be emphasised, and greater confidence inspired in it. It is in this spirit that the Opposition and the unions outside should follow the passage of the measure. The interests of the country, the interests of every individual member of the unions, demand that some serious attempt should be made to bring about the more harmonious development of industrial enterprise. This bill provides the opportunity to help this along. Destructive criticism can do no good, constructive criticism may make the bill a great power for general good.

BASIS OF PEACE

PRESIDENT WILSON'S REPLY

TO GERMANY AND AUSTRIA

AMERICA WILL NOT TURN BACK

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.

President Wilson to-day addressed Congress, dealing with the question of a basis for permanent world peace, and replying to the recent speeches of Count von Hertling and Count Czernin, on the Central Powers' war aims.

The President's address was as follows:—

Gentlemen of the Congress: On January 8 I had the honour of addressing you on the objects of the war as our people conceive them. The Prime Minister of Great Britain had spoken in similar terms on January 5. To these addresses the German Chancellor replied on the 24th, and Count Czernin, for Austria, on the same day. It is gratifying to have our desire so promptly relieved that all exchanges of view on this great matter should be made in the hearing of all the world.

Count Czernin's reply, which is directed chiefly to my own address of January 8, is uttered in a very friendly tone. He finds in my statement a sufficiently encouraging approach to the views of his own Government to justify him in believing that it furnishes a basis for a more detailed discussion of purposes by the two Governments. He is represented to have intimated that the views he was expressing had been communicated to me beforehand, and that I was aware of them at the time he was uttering them; but in this I am sure I was misunderstood. I had received no intimation of what he intended to say. There was, of course, no reason why he should communicate privately with me. I am quite content to be one of his public audience.

CHANCELLOR'S VAGUE REPLY.

Count von Hertling's reply is, I must say, very vague and very confusing. It is full of equivocal phrases, and leads it is not clear where. But it is certainly in a very different tone from that of Count Czernin, and apparently of an opposite purpose. It confirms, I am sorry to say, rather than removes, the unfortunate impression made by what we had learned of the conferences at Brest-Litovsk. His discussion and acceptance of our general principles lead him to no practical conclusion. He refuses to apply them to the substantive items which must constitute the body of any final settlement. He is jealous of international action and of international counsel. He accepts, he says, the principle of public diplomacy, but he appears to insist that it be confined, at any rate in this case, to generalities, and that the several particular questions of territory and sovereignty, the several questions upon whose settlement must depend the acceptance of peace by the 23 States now engaged in the war, must be discussed and settled, not in general council, but severally by the nations most immediately concerned by interest or neighbourhood. He agrees that the seas should be free, but looks askance at any limitation to that freedom by international action in the interest of the common order. He would without reserve be glad to see economic barriers removed between nation and nation, for that could in no way impede the ambitions of the military party with whom he seems constrained to keep on terms. Neither does he raise objection to a limitation of armaments. That matter will be settled of itself, he thinks, by the economic conditions which must follow the war.

But the German colonies, he demands, must be returned without debate. He will discuss with no one but the representatives of Russia what disposition shall be made of the peoples and the lands of the Baltic provinces; with no one but the Government of France the "conditions" under which French territory shall be evacuated; and only with Austria what shall be done with Poland. In the determination of all questions affecting the Balkan States he defers, as I understand him, to Austria and Turkey; and with regard to the agreements to be entered into concerning the non-Turkish peoples of the present Ottoman Empire, to the Turkish authorities themselves. After a settlement all around, effected in this fashion, by individual barter and concession, he would have no objection, if I correctly interpret his statement, to a league of nations which would undertake to hold the new balance of power steady against external disturbance.

It must be evident to everyone who understands what this war has wrought in the opinion and temper of the world that no general peace, no peace worth the infinite sacrifices of these years of tragical suffering, can possibly be arrived at in any such fashion. The method the German Chancellor proposes is the method of the Congress of Vienna. We cannot and will not return to that. What is at stake now is the peace of the world. What we are striving for is a new international order based upon the broad and universal principles of right and justice—no mere peace of shreds and patches.

Is it possible that Count von Hertling does not see that, does not grasp it, is in fact living in his thought in a world dead and gone? Has he utterly forgotten the Reichstag resolutions of July 19, or does he deliberately ignore them? They spoke of the conditions of a general peace, not of national aggrandisement or of arrangements between State and State. The peace of the world depends upon the just settlement of each of the several problems to which I adverted in my recent address to the Congress. I, of course, do not mean that the peace of the world depends upon the acceptance of any particular set of suggestions as to the way in which those problems are to be dealt with. I mean only that those problems each and all affect the whole world; that unless they are dealt with in a spirit of unselfish and unbiased justice, with a view to the wishes, the natural connections, the racial aspirations, the security, and the peace of mind of the peole involved, no permanent peace will have been attained. They cannot be discussed separately or in corners. None of them constitutes a private or separate interest, from which the opinion of the world may be shut out. Whatever affects the peace affects mankind, and nothing settled by military force, if settled wrong, is settled at all. It will presently have to be reopened.

THE COURT OF MANKIND.

Is Count von Hertling not aware that he is speaking in the court of mankind, that all the awakened nations of the world now sit in judgment on what every public man, of whatever nation, may say on the issues of a conflict which has spread to every region of the world? The Reichstag resolutions of July themselves frankly accepted the decisions of that court.

There shall be no annexations, no contributions, no punitive damages. Peoples are not to be handed about from one sovereignty to another by an international conference, or an understanding between rivals and antagonists. National aspirations must be respected; peoples may now be dominated and governed only by their own consent.

"Self-determination" is not a mere phrase. It is an imperative principle of action which statesmen will henceforth ignore at their peril. We cannot have general peace for the asking, or by the mere arrangements of a peace conference. It cannot be pieced together out of individual understandings between powerful States. All the parties to this war must join in the settlement of every issue anywhere involved in it; because what we are seeking is a peace that we can all unite to guarantee and maintain, and every item of it must be submitted to the common judgment whether it be right and fair, an act of justice, rather than a bargain between Sovereigns.

The United States has no desire to interfere in European affairs or to act as arbiter in European territorial disputes. She would disdain to take advantage of any internal weakness or disorder to impose her own will upon another people. She is quite ready to be shown that the settlements she has suggested are not the best or the most enduring. They are only her own provisional sketch of principles, and on the way in which they should be applied. But she entered this war because she was made a partner, whether she should, would, or not, in the sufferings and indignities inflicted by the military masters of Germany against peace and security of mankind; and the conditions of peace will touch her as nearly as they will touch any other nation to which is intrusted a leading part in the maintenance of civilisation.

She cannot see her way to peace until the causes of this war are removed, its renewal rendered as nearly as may be impossible.

RIGHTS OF SMALL NATIONS.

This war had its roots in the disregard of the rights of small nations, and of nationalities which lacked the union and the force to make good their claim to determine their own allegiance and their own forms of political life. Covenants must now be entered into which will render such things impossible for the future; and those covenants must be backed by the united force of all the nations that love justice and are willing to maintain it at any cost. If territorial settlements and the political relations of great populations which have not the organised power to resist are to be determined by the contracts of the powerful Governments which consider themselves most directly affected, as Count von Hertling proposes, why may not economic questions also? It has come about in the altered world in which we now find ourselves that justice and the rights of peoples affect the whole field of international dealing as much as access to raw material, and fair and equal conditions of trade. Count von Hertling wants the essential bases of commercial and industrial life to be safeguarded by common agreement and guarantee; but he cannot expect that to be conceded him if the other matters to be determined by the articles of peace are not handled in the same way as the items in the final accounting. He cannot ask the benefit of common agreement in the one field without according it in the other. I take it for granted that he sees that separate and selfish compacts with regard to trade and the essential materials of manufacture would afford no foundation for peace. Neither, he may rest assured, will separate and selfish compacts with regard to provinces and peoples.

Count Czernin seems to see the fundamental elements of peace with clear eyes, and does not seem to obscure them. He sees that an independent Poland, made up of all the indisputably Polish peoples, who lie contiguous to one another, as a matter of European concern, must, of course, be concerned; that Belgium must be evacuated, and evacuated and restored, no matter what sacrifices and concessions they may involve; and that national aspirations must be satisfied, even within his own empire, in the interest of Europe and mankind. If he is silent about questions which touch the interest and purpose of his allies more clearly than they touch those of Austria only, it must, of course, be because he feels contrained, I suppose, to defer to Germany and Turkey in the circumstances. Seeing and conceding, as he does, the essential principles involved and the necessity of candidly applying them, he naturally feels that Austria can respond to the purpose of peace as expressed by the United States, with less embarrassment than could Germany. He would probably have gone much farther had it not been for the embarrassments of Austria's alliances and of her dependence upon Germany.

FOUNDATIONS OF PEACE.

After all, the test of whether it is possible for either Government to go any further in this comparison of views is simple and obvious the principles to be applied are these:—

(1) That each part of the final settlement must be based upon the essential justice of that particular case, and upon such adjustments as are most likely to bring a peace that will be permanent.

(2) That peoples and provinces are not to be bartered about from Sovereignty to Sovereignty, as if they were mere chattels and pawns in a game, even the great game, now for ever discredited, of the balance of power; but that

(3) Every territorial settlement involved in this war must be made in the interest and for the benefit of the populations concerned, and not as a part of any mere adjustment or compromise of claims amongst rival States;

(4) That all well-defined national aspirations shall be accorded the utmost satisfaction that can be accorded them without introducing new or perpetuating old elements of discord and antagonism that would be likely in time to break the peace of Europe and consequently of the world.

A general peace erected upon such foundations can be discussed. Until such a peace can be secured we have no choice but to go on. So far as we can judge, the principles that we regard as fundamental are already everywhere accepted as imperative, except among the spokesmen of the military and annexationist party in Germany. If they have anywhere else been rejected, the objectors have not been sufficiently numerous or influential to make their voices audible. The tragical circumstance is that this one party in Germany is apparently willing and able to send millions of men to their death to prevent what all the world now sees to be just.

WE CAN NEVER TURN BACK.

I would not be a true spokesman of the people of the United States if I did not say once more that we entered this war upon no small occasion, and that we can never turn back from a course chosen upon principle.

Our resources are in part mobilised now, and we shall not pause until they are mobilised in their entirety. Our armies are rapidly going to the fighting front, and will go more and more rapidly. Our whole strength will be put into this war of emancipation—emancipation from the threat and attempted mastery of selfish groups of autocratic rulers—whatever the difficulties and present partial delays.

We are indomitable in our power of independent action, and can in no circumstances consent to live in a world governed by intrigue and force. We believe that our own desire for a new international order under which reason and justice and the common interests of mankind shall prevail is the desire of enlightened men everywhere. Without that new order, the world will be without peace, and human life will lack tolerable conditions of existence and development. Having set our hand to the task of achieving it, we shall not turn back.

TRUE SPIRIT OF AMERICA.

I hope that it is not necessary for me to add that no word of what I have said is intended as a threat. That is not the temper of our people. I have spoken thus only that the whole world may know the true spirit of America—that men everywhere may know that our passion for justice and for self-Government is no mere passion of words, but a passion which, once set in action, must be satisfied. The power of the United States is a menace to no nation or people. It will never be used in aggression or for the aggrandisement of any selfish interest of our own. It springs out of freedom, and is for the service of freedom.

SPEECH WELL RECEIVED.

President Wilson's speech has had a most favourable reception, and is likely to receive the approval of the whole country. It is interpreted that its main purpose is to drive a wedge further between Germany and Austria.

"HEAVEN MUST ASSIST."

GERMAN EMPEROR TALKS OF CONQUEST.

An Amsterdam report says the German Emperor, in a speech at Homburg, declared:—I wish to live at peace with my neighbours, but a German victory must first be acknowledged. Our troops will gain it under the great Hindenburg. Then will come the peace we need for a strong future. To this end the violent powers of Heaven must assist us. Everyone, from schoolboy to greybeard, must set his thoughts on conquest and a German peace. The Fatherland will live.

GERMANY'S WAR BILL.

BIG TAXES AHEAD.

Count von Preysing, speaking in the Bavarian Upper House, interpellated the Government regarding Germany's war bill taxation, which after the war would be 9½ milliard marks, four times that imposed before the war, necessitating an average taxation of from 50 to 60 per cent. on incomes, or the confiscation of capital to a minimum of 40 or 50 milliards.

Herr Breunime (Finance Minister) admitted that 10 milliards of marks would be required to meet interest.

Other speakers deplored the statement, as it would create an impression that Germany was faced with financial ruin unless she got indemnities.

Count Toerring, the Crown Prince's brother-in-law, declared that the Imperial Government would not insist upon indemnities, and should strive for an honourable peace, not a pan-German peace.

THE JUGO SLAVS.

ITALY'S PROBLEM.

From Rome it is reported that the newspapers are discussing the possibility of an Italian agreement with the Jugo Slavs. The idea is rapidly gaining in popularity, though the "Giornale d'Italia" opposes any reduction of the Italian national programme, contending that such action would be a sign of weakness towards Austria.

The "Corriera della Sera," representing commercial interests, insists that it is essential to remove the causes of friction with the Jugo Slavs, which, it says, have only profited Austria. Italy should attain greatness by generosity to the Jugo Slavs, Albanians, and Greeks.

WHITE AUSTRALIA.

INDIAN PROBLEMS.

Mr. Henry Polak, a solicitor, formerly associated with Mr. Gokhale in championing the Indians in South Africa, lecturing before the East India Association, vigorously denounced Mr. Douglas Owen's letter to the "Times" proposing an Indian settlement in the Northern Territory.

Mr. Polak insisted that India was unpopulated in parts, and emigration was not desired, except of a voluntary nature, with full citizenship. He quoted Messrs. Andrews and Pearson's exposure of the evils of Indian emigration to Fiji, and instanced the humiliating treatment of the Maharaja of Navanagar (Ranjitsinghi) when visiting Australia.

Mr. Alfred Sharpe wrote:—"Magisterial experience in Fiji has convinced me that the only emigration possible is to self-governing settlements."

Mr. Ford Carmichael, who presided, said it was useless to hope that Australia ever would abandon the White Australia ideal, with which he thoroughly sympathised.

DESTROYER SUNK.

The Admiralty announce that the destroyer Boxer was sunk in the English Channel on the night of February 8 as the result of a collision. One man is missing.

[The Boxer was an old destroyer of the A class, which were launched in 1894-95, and ranged between 260 and 295 tons.]

ZIONIST COMMISSION.

The Press Bureau announces that the British Government has authorised the Zionist Commission to proceed to Palestine with a view to repatriating the Jews whom the enemy compelled to leave, organising relief work, reopening institutions, and restoring damage.

AMERICA SPEEDING UP.

A Washington message states that Mr. Baker (Secretary for War) has reorganised the five branches of the War Department, securing efficiency and eliminating red tape.

RUSSIA.

AT PEACE WITH TEUTONS.

WAR ENDED BUT NO TREATY SIGNED.

LONDON, Feb. 11.

It is reported that Russia has made peace with the Central Powers.

An unconfirmed report has been received that Lenin has ordered a general demobilisation.

M. Litvinoff, the Bolshevik representative in London, accepts the accuracy of the demobilisation report, and assumes that war with the Central Powers has ended.

The "Pall Mall Gazette" says: "If the Bolsheviks have thrown up the sponge the decision converts Russia into a community of passive resisters, and ends Trotsky's boastful devotion to the cause of self-determination."

The newspaper wonders whether the result has been produced by recent financial refreshers from Germany.

Reports have reached Amsterdam that Russia and Austro-Hungary have agreed to the mutual repatriation of all their respective subjects under 16 years of age, and those unfit for military service between 16 and 45; also doctors and priests.

GERMAN STATEMENT.

(Admiralty—Per Wireless Press.)

A German official report announces that Trotsky at Brest-Litovsk declared that the war with the Central Powers had ended, but Russia refrained from signing peace.

Trotsky announced that he had ordered complete Russian demobilisation on all fronts.

The Ukrainian peace treaty provides for the exchange of prisoners of war.

UKRAINIAN PEACE TREATY.

A Copenhagen message says that the Ukraine peace treaty secures the maintenance of pre-war frontiers between Austria and Russia and the evacuation of occupied territory. The treaty, which has been ratified by both parties, provides for no reparation or indemnities on either side, the mutual exchange of surplus agricultural and industrial products made before July 31, and a special commission is to fix the quantity, quality, and prices. The general Russian tariff of 1903 is to be maintained.

A Russian wireless official message from Brest-Litovsk states that prior to February 8 the whole of Kieff was in the hands of the Soviets with the exception of the Pecherski monastery, where the remnants of the Kieff Rada were entrenched. Pecherski was captured on February 8, and the remnants of the Rada forces fled. Nothing remains of the Rada now but a sad memory, and its delegation at Brest-Litovsk is therefore without existing authority.

PREVIOUS OPINIONS.

The Stockholm correspondent of the Paris "Matin" had an interview with M. Kameneff, the Bolshevik delegate, who said that the Germans at the Brest-Litovsk from the beginning systematically had hampered peace. General Hoffmann, with cynical frankness, showed him a map of the future German frontier, which only left the Pinck marshes to Russia. "We thereupon," he said, "broke off negotiations. The Soviet declared that the frontiers must not be traced with the point of the sword, but by the will of the people. Any other peace would contain the germs of future wars. A separate peace between Germany and Russia is improbable. We should regard it as a misfortune."

He did not expect a resumption of hostilities by Russia, and was convinced the German people would disavow its Government and refuse to fight against Russia.

"I consider," he added, "that the Ukrainians have betrayed us."

The Stockholm correspondent of the "New York Herald" interviewed M. Orlovsky, the Bolshevik Minister in Sweden, who said that the Bolsheviks were nearer to war with Germany than ever since the revolution.

ROUMANIA.

Germany's ultimatum to Roumania, demanding her entrance into the peace negotiations under the threat of resumption of hostilities, was of four days' duration, and expired on Saturday.

FINLAND'S CIVIL WAR.

Copenhagen advices state that the White Guards' headquarters report they have possession of three-fourths of Finland, though the Red Guards are very strong and have a large army near Vilpula. Severe fighting is expected.

SWISS BOLSHEVIKS.

GRAVE TROUBLE THREATENED

A Berne wireless message says the Swiss Government, instead of repatriating them, mobilised for useful work great numbers of undesirable refugees, including escapees from military service, with a view to keeping them under proper control.

Public opinion is now perturbed regarding the nature of a Bolshevik agitation embodied in a resolution of the extremist workmen's union in Zurich, demanding the discharge of alien deserters, payment of indemnities to them for temporary loss of liberty, and demobilisation of the army, except contingents required to suppress contraband on the frontiers.

The union announces that if, the general body of trade unions and the Socialist party confirm the resolution, an ultimatum will be sent to the Government that a general strike will be declared unless the demands are conceded within 48 hours.

RIOTS IN DENMARK.

A Copenhagen report states that unemployment, owing to lack of raw materials, caused serious syndicalist rioting. The crowd stormed the Exchange, injuring brokers and damaging the building. The police interfered. Several persons were wounded with paving stones.

COAXING FOOD HOARDERS.

The officials of the Ministry of Food are arranging that hoarded food may be disgorged under an amnesty, and will be removed in covered vans in the darkness. No hoards have been yet surrendered in London.

POST-WAR RECONSTRUCTION.

Dr. Addison (Minister for Reconstruction), in a speech at Leeds, said the Ministry for Reconstruction was taking steps to restore extinct and languishing industries. There was a great wealth of suggestions and inventions available, which had not yet been exploited. Many unexploited industries would start after the war.

PURCHASE OF SHIPS.

The Ministry of Shipping has added a provision to the regulations regarding the purchase of ships, making the Shipping Controller's approval necessary before any person can purchase shares in a company whereby such person obtains control of ships.

THE AUSTRALIANS.

A SUCCESSFUL RAID.

FOE LOSES HEAVILY.

LONDON, Feb. 12.

Sir Douglas Haig, reporting at noon on Monday, stated: The Australians successfully raided to the south-east of Messines, and inflicted many casualties, also taking 28 prisoners.

A Belgian patrol attacked a post in the Merckem sector, killing the garrison.

Sir Douglas Haig on Monday night reported: Australians raiding last night south-east of Messines captured 37 prisoners, three machine guns, and a trench mortar. They inflicted heavy casualties.

It is estimated that the raiders killed a hundred, apart from the losses caused by our preliminary bombardment.

We successfully repulsed a counter-attack. Our casualties numbered 20.

Hostile artillery has been intermittently active south-west and west of Cambrai. Our batteries in this area effectively engaged working parties.

FRENCH FRONT.

A French communique on Monday afternoon stated: Intermittent reciprocal artillery activity prevailed during the night north of the Aisne in the Corbeny-Juvicourt sector. This activity was more marked on the right of the Meuse in the region of Bezonvaux.

GERMAN REPORT.

(Admiralty—per Wireless Press.)

A wireless German official message states: English reconnoitring advances led to violent engagements at many points, especially near Warneton and Armentieres.

IMPENDING OFFENSIVE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.

Mr. Baker, United States Secretary for War, in a communique, expresses the opinion that a big German offensive at several points on the West front is imminent. Germany is strengthening the West front with troops from Austria and the Russian front. There is great dissatisfaction in Austria owing to the despatch of Austrians to the West front.

AERIAL REPRISALS.

GERMAN PEOPLE AFRAID.

A message received from Geneva states that many German towns, especially those on the French frontier, are increasingly fearful of aerial reprisals. The whole of South-west Germany is in a state of alarm. The burgomasters of the chief Rhine towns visited Berlin, and urged the Government to come to an arrangement with the Allies' Governments.

The reply given them was unsatisfactory, and the burgomasters returned home.

TRIAL OF BOLO.

AUDIENCE WITH KING OF SPAIN.

A Paris message states that a curious episode occurred at the trial of Bolo. A statement from the King of Spain, which was read in court, referred to the audience that the King granted to Bolo and M. Charles Humbert in October. The King's statement says: "Humbert spoke about certain French politicians, especially Caillaux, and said that Caillaux held me in high esteem. I replied, 'I am surprised, as I did not think Caillaux was a friend of mine.' Humbert appealed to Bolo for corroboration."

The King adds: "I gathered that Humbert's idea was to reconcile me with Caillaux. My impression was that Caillaux was to return to power, and desired to efface the unpleasant impression that he had made upon me a few months before."

Monsignor Bolo, giving evidence, said: "If I were not convinced of my brother's innocence I would not be here, but would have found some hole wherein to hide my sorrow and shame."

AUSTRALIAN RED CROSS.

ACTIVITIES IN ENGLAND.

The Australian Red Cross has arranged for free training for an eight-weeks' course in wool-classing at Bradford for discharged Australian soldiers, in batches of ten.

The society during January issued 6414 kitbags for homeward-bound soldiers, and despatched 21,746 food parcels and 1611 comforts parcels for prisoners.

ALPINE WARFARE.

Mr. Warner Allen, describing his visit to the Alpine battle-front 12,000ft above the sea, says: The Austrians hold the record. They dragged up a mountain gun to the summit of Mount Ortler, 12,700ft. The Italians hold Konig's Spitzen, nearly 165ft lower. Alpine troops scale these heights daily. The thermometer is far below zero. Blinding blizzards drive the snow through the smallest chinks in the huts. Men who leave their shelter can hardly breathe. All activity in bad weather is confined to tunnels cut in the snow or glacier ice. When the weather is fine the troops live in the healthiest conditions, the only disease being frostbite. Only five men are on the sick list out of 1500.

ESCORT FOR ROYALTY.

Australian, New Zealand, and other dominion cavalry will comprise the escort for the King and Queen at the opening of Parliament on Tuesday.

EX-SULTAN OF TURKEY DEAD.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 11.

The death is announced of Abdul Hamid, ex-Sultan of Turkey, from inflammation of the lungs.

[The deceased was born on September 22, 1842, being the second son of the Sultan Abdul Medjid. He succeeded to the throne on August 31, 1876, and reigned till he was deposed in favour of his younger brother, the present Sultan, in April, 1909.]

RECRUITING.

Sergt. Cross, D.C.M., Sergt. Browne, Sergt.-major Urquhart, and Private Seymour, will be the speakers at the recruiting meeting in Martin-place to-day, at 1 o'clock.

To-night, at 8 o'clock, Lieut. Littlejohn, Private Seymour, and Trooper Atkinson will appeal for recruits at the Enmore tram terminus.

The demonstration in connection with the recruiting meeting in Martin-place on Friday next will include a display of the Gurkha's fighting knife by Sergt. Devlin, and a bayonet bout between Sergt. Devlin and Corpl. Stead.

COLLISION OFF BOTANY.

COASTAL STEAMER AND TUG.

A collision occurred off Cape Banks, near the entrance to Botany Bay, on Monday evening between the coastal steamer Dunmore and the tugboat Champion.

The impact was a severe one, and the Dunmore was so badly damaged that she returned to port. Her top bulwarks were stove in on the port side, and damage was done to her rail and decking. The Champion was slightly damaged.

LATE WAR NEWS.

INDIAN LABOUR.

LONDON, Feb. 11.

Speaking at a meeting of the East India Association, Mr. Ford Carmichael, who presided, said that only a handful of Australians—who were financially interested—favoured the exploiting of Indian labour. The majority of Indians opposed indentured emigration, and Australia irrevocably opposed the immigration of Indians—indentured or free.

Mr. Lamington expressed the view that Indian immigration into the self-governing Dominions was impracticable.

WAR NOTES.

GERMANY'S MISTAKES.

The historian reviewing in future the events of the great war will, we hope, look for the main causes which led to the defeat of the Central Powers. He will seize upon the battle of the Marne, the Verdun and Somme offensives, and other military operations which marked important turning points in the progress of the great struggle. He will recognise in the Marne the miracle which prevented the realisation of the Teuton's dream of conquest. In the failure of the Verdun offensive he will see Germany again foiled in her desperate effort to achieve a decision. In the battle of the Somme and other offensives of 1916 and 1917 he will see Germany standing on the defensive in the Western or main theatre of war, and no longer hopeful of realising her dreams of conquest. The Russian revolution will mark another turning point where, if present indications are supported by subsequent developments, the Central Powers will make a third great effort to achieve decision. But great as will be the effect of these military operations upon the final result, the historian will probably conclude that the primary and main cause of defeat was the inability of the Central Powers to keep out of the struggle those Powers whose territory was not directly affected, and whose main concern was that the smaller and weaker nations should not be compelled to submit to injustice. To this fatal error may largely be attributed the results of many of the main military moves. The result of the Marne might have been otherwise had not the British Expeditionary Force played such an important part in the early stages of the war. The Verdun offensive would have achieved more pronounced results had not the British army been holding a vital section of the line in France at the time, and the turning point marked by the battle of the Somme might not have been reached at all had it not been for the appearance in the field of what were then new British armies. England, who came into the war on behalf of violated Belgium, was largely responsible for the failure of the great German scheme of conquest, and it is hardly necessary to add that this fact was mainly due to the power of the British navy.

AMERICAN PARTICIPATION.

With the dissipation of her dreams of world conquest, Germany turned her attention towards securing an inconclusive peace, which, while not providing her with the whole of the spoils for which she had planned and prepared, would still leave her with sufficient to justify her actions in the eyes of her own people. She relied upon her unrestricted submarine campaign to achieve this aim, but in doing so forced the United States of America into the ranks of her opponents. Had she foreseen the completeness of the Russian collapse she would have hesitated before driving America to take sides. The announcement in to-day's cablegrams that Russia has declared that war with the Central Powers has ended, and that complete Russian demobilisation on all fronts has been ordered, shows how serious the position of the Allies would have been had not American intervention assured them of final success. No one can say that Germany's desire for an inconclusive peace would not have been within reasonable distance of attainment had not American intervention more than set off the collapse on the Eastern front, and maintained Italy's confidence in final victory in spite of her recent reverses. That the Central Powers will make a big bid for success before America can exert her maximum efforts seems reasonably certain. The weight of artillery, more than the actual reinforcements in men, which they will be able to concentrate on the Western front, now that they are relieved of their main responsibility in the East, will doubtless enable them to gain a certain amount of ground when they strike. The Allies, however, are in a better position to sustain the shock than ever they have been. Although German gains on the West are likely to create uneasiness amongst the people in Allied countries after the chain of successes which has attended the Allies' arms there since the beginning of July, 1916, there does not seem to be reason to fear that the enemy will achieve anything approaching a decisive success before the American forces and American industry and organisation commence to restore to the Allies that superiority in men and material likely to ensure final success. Germany has made many wise decisions, and has secured remarkable successes in the present war, but she has also made errors, and not the least serious of these were her deliberate and indefensible actions which dragged in to the war as her enemies first England and then the United States. While the first step robbed her of the chance of speedy and pronounced victory, the second promises to prevent her from escaping from the consequences of her crimes.

RUSSIAN DEMOBILISATION.

If the statement attributed to M. Trotsky in the German official wireless message is correct, it cannot be regarded with complete equanimity. Should Trotsky be able to compel complete Russian demobilisation on all fronts his action will doubtless result in increasing the weight of the blow or blows which the Central Powers are preparing to deliver elsewhere. Impotent as the Russian armies have been during the past year, their very presence has undoubtedly pinned down a considerable number of enemy troops and guns on the long eastern front. Complete Russian demobilisation, however, would relieve the Germans of all semblance of anxiety regarding their eastern line, which, although always lightly held, would then only need to be watched by patrols. The effect of Russian demobilisation upon the food shortage in Germany might not be very great. A certain amount of produce would, no doubt, pass into Germany, but whatever supplies of wheat are available would be likely to come from Ukraine, which is reported already to have agreed to peace. The position of Roumania remains as one of the worst features of the Russian collapse, and if Germany succeeds in forcing her into accepting peace—as she may do—it is quite possible that the Allied armies in Macedonia may be made to feel the pressure of the enemy forces released from the regions to the northward.

AUSTRALIAN RAID NEAR MESSINES.

Although it has been nothing more than a raid, the affair in which Australians distinguished themselves in the region south-east of Messines appears to have been a very successful one. We are not usually given so much information regarding raids as that contained in Sir Douglas Haig's report this morning in reference to this particular one, which was carried out by Austalians not very far from the sector where they achieved their greater success in the offensive against the Messines ridge in June of last year. Raids have become a necessary part of the work of a fighting force, and, now that the time is approaching when a revival of activity along the fighting front might be expected, they are likely to become more frequent as time goes on, especially as both sides are particularly anxious to find out what the enemy is doing, and to identify units holding the line at different points. These raids are sometimes attended by a fairly heavy proportion of losses to the attackers, but the Australians appear to have escaped fairly lightly in this particular instance. The number of prisoners brought back was much in excess of the total casualties sustained by the raiders, while the losses inflicted on the enemy were much heavier than those suffered by the Australians. This visit of the Australians appears to have impressed the enemy, as it was evidently one of those "violent" engagements near Warneton, to which he refers in his communique this morning, which, by the way, is the first official message we have had from him regarding military operations for some time past.

NEW GOVERNOR.

ADDRESSES OF WELCOME.

Public bodies desirous of presenting addresses to his Excellency Sir Walter Davidson, Governor-designate, on his arrival, are requested to send copies of such addresses to the Secretary, Premier's Department, at the earliest possible moment. His Excellency has consented to receive all addresses on Tuesday, 19th inst., at 11.30 a.m.

RETURNED SOLDIERS.

One hundred and fifty returned soldiers are invited to assist in the welcome to his Excellency the Governor-designate on Monday morning. It is proposed that returned soldiers shall line the entrance to Government House. All returned soldiers desiring to participate in this welcome to his Excellency should communicate with A. G. Potter, secretary, Returned Sailors and Soldiers' Imperial League of Australia, Macdonell House, Pitt-street, Sydney. Uniforms may be worn by permission of the State Commandant, General Lee, and refreshments will be provided.

FOOD PRICES.

FEDERAL INQUIRY.

Mr. A. B. Piddington, K.C., Chief Interstate Commissioner, yesterday, at the Commonwealth Bank-chambers, resumed the inquiry into the prices of foodstuffs in Sydney, dealing with milk, butter, cheese, and bacon.

Mr. A. S. Mackenzie represented the Primary Producers' Union; Mr. New, the Retail Grocers' Association; Alderman Bramston and Mr. P. Adler, the War-time Amelioration Committee of the Trade Unions. Alderman Bramston explained that the War-time Amelioration Committee had been formed from a number of trade unions, but did not represent the Trades and Labour Council, which body would on Thursday next deal with the commission's invitation to be represented.

Replying to an application by Mr. Kleinsmith for permission to represent the People's Food Protection Association, the Chief Commissioner said the commission regarded the Trades and Labour Council as the permanent and most authoritative body to represent the interests it was desired to reach. He would not give a definite decision as to the representation of those interests until after the council had on Thursday dealt with with the invitation.

Replying to a further question, the Chief Commissioner said that any announcement of the result of the investigation of meat prices would be made by the Federal Government.

Mr. Valentine Ackerman, Commonwealth Prices Commissioner for New South Wales, produced a number of proclamations of the prices of milk, butter, cheese, and bacon.

The Chief Commissioner said that in the proclamations concerning butter there appeared to be a great many inconsistencies, and it was difficult to understand them. The proclamations, he said, should be very clear, because they affected people's commercial interests as well as the public prices.

Mr. Ackerman added that inspection seemed to show that the butter proclamations were being ignored by both the wholesale and the retail trade.

Mr. A. S. Mackenzie, secretary of the Primary Producers' Union, gave evidence of dairy production, and produced figures as to the working of what he said were typical farms.

The commission adjourned until this morning.

ROBBERY AT A BANK.

THIEF SECURES £100.

CHASE IN THE CITY.

A daring robbery, involving the loss of £100, was carried out yesterday afternoon at the Pitt and Bathurst streets branch of the English, Scottish, and Australian Bank.

Shortly after 2 p.m. Mr. William Walker, proprietor of Walker's Restaurant, 29 Park-street, entered the bank, and walked to the counter, where a receiving teller was at work. He placed two bundles of notes on the counter, and was about to hand them over to the bank official when a man, who had evidently followed him, asked the teller for a shilling in exchange for 12 coppers. While the teller was getting the money the man seized one of the bundles, containing £100 in £1 notes, struck Mr. Walker and the teller on the face with a bag of flour, and bolted.

Both Mr. Walker and the official were temporarily blinded, but on recovering himself Mr. Walker dashed off in pursuit of the thief, who ran along a lane from Bathurst-street leading to George-street, crossed over the road, and, it is believed, entered a shop.

In the busy traffic Mr. Walker, although assisted in the chase by several civilians, lost sight of the thief, who, probably, managed to get through a shop into the back of George-street and escape to Sussex-street. At any rate, he was not again seen after crossing George-street.

Inspector Walker, of the Criminal Investigation Department, Police Headquarters, was immediately notified, and he detailed detectives Leary and Robertson to make inquiries.

A PRIEST'S LOYALTY.

REPLY TO SENATOR PEARCE.

Reference was made yesterday by Alderman J. T. Ness, Mayor of Marrickville, to the statement made by Senator Pearce, Minister for Defence, regarding the allegation made by him (Alderman Ness) in relation to the Rev. Father Charles Jerger.

"Senator Pearce," said Alderman Ness, "asserted that if the persons concerned were not satisfied with the decision of the Intelligence Department they should communicate with him. The facts of the matter are as follows:—In consequence of the disloyal utterances of the Rev. Father Jerger, a Roman Catholic priest of German parentage, attached to St. Brigid's Church, Marrickville, which elicited strong protests from members of his own Church, including a brother priest, I brought the matter first of all under the notice of Mr. George Fuller, as Acting Premier, in the presence of the Inspector-General of Police, Mr. Mitchell. Mr. Fuller said that it was a most serious matter, but pointed out that it rested with the Federal authorities.

I thanked him, and undertook to see Mr. Joseph Cook, Minister for the Navy, who was in Sydney at the time, and at the latter end of November I placed the whole of the facts before Mr. Cook, and asked him to take action, feeling that the influence of the priest in question was likely seriously to affect recruiting in the Marrickville district, and, moreover, his presence and utterances were distinctly distasteful to all patriotic citizens. At the same time I informed Mr. Cook that papers detailing the matter had been forwarded to the Defence Department, and had been endorsed, 'No further action to be taken.' Mr. Cook stated that the only man who could authorise such an endorsement was Senator Pearce. Finding that the matter had apparently been allowed to drop, I brought the facts under the notice of the military authorities, but still nothing was done; and I felt it my duty in the common interests to make a public statement. I may add, as to the bona fides of the matter, that I placed before Mr. Cook a lengthy letter that I had received from a Roman Catholic priest, in which the complaints against the Rev. Father Jerger were made. As chairman of the recruiting committee and Mayor of the municipality, I feel strongly that it is the duty of the authorities either to have Father Jerger interned or removed from a district where his presence is so disturbing."

SOLDIERS' LETTERS.

The postal authorities intimate that letters and packets for the Expeditionary Forces in England and France will be received at the General Post Office until 5 p.m. on Monday next.

SHOCKING RAILWAY ACCIDENT

BATHURST.—A shocking accident, resulting in the instantaneous death of two well-known Bathurst railway men, and critical injuries to a third, occurred on Tuesday afternoon in the Bathurst loco yards. Charles Bradley, leading fitter, with two fitters' labourers, Walter Hoskins and Geo. Toby, were coupling the "big end" on an engine, and were engaged with two large crowbars in "punching" the piston. They had levelled the piston some distance until it came in contact with a high head of steam, which violently forced it back. Bradley and Hoskins were hit on the head with the bar and shockingly mutilated, while Toby was struck in the body just below the arms, and was hurled back several feet. Two fingers were cut off. His condition is serious.

STATE PARLIAMENT.

CABINET TROUBLE.

GAS BILL SECOND READING.

A number of questions were asked of the Premier in the Legislative Assembly yesterday afternoon bearing upon the reported crisis in the Cabinet. Mr. Holman, however, declined to be drawn into any discussion of the situation. He told the leader of the Opposition, who asked about the building of the Henty-Billabong railway line, that he hoped to be able to make a thoroughly satisfactory statement on the following day. After the dinner adjournment, the House proceeded with the second reading debate on the Gas Act Amendment Bill. Mr. Buckley gave notice of his intention to move that, in the opinion of the House, this measure was detrimental to the best interests of the State, and directly oppressive on the poor people.

REPORTED CABINET CRISIS.

Mr. G. M'Girr asked if the Premier had received the resignations of any of his Ministers, or if he expected to get any.

Mr. Holman: I am afraid I can't gratify Mr. M'Girr by telling him of any resignations, either actual or pending. I have not seen the reports he refers to, but I have no doubt they are exaggerated.

Mr. M'Girr asked whether, in view of the "startling statements in the Press," that certain districts were being allowed to construct railways through the medium of money locally subscribed, the Treasurer would give the House any information as to the full extent of the undertakings; further, in view of the great losses which would possibly be sustained on many of these railways, who would be responsible outside the small amount of interest guaranteed by the settlers, for such losses; also, had any of the guarantors been called upon to pay the guarantees, whether the railways were paying interest or not, in the case of other lines in connection with which guarantees had been obtained in the past.

Mr. Holman said the question traversed largely the ground already covered by another question in connection with which he had promised to give an answer on the following day, when he would be dealing with the general question.

Later, Mr. M'Girr asked the Minister for Railways, relative to the construction of railways by local loans, if that was now an established policy.

The Speaker pointed out that questions could not be asked relative to policy.

Mr. M'Girr asked whether other districts more deserving of facilities would be treated in the same way as those to which reference had been made; also, whether more important lines which had been neglected were to be carried out.

Mr. Ball replied that as the Premier had intimated that he proposed to make a statement on the following day in regard to the matter of policy, he (Mr. Ball) would not attempt to deal with the question. A difference of opinion might exist as to the importance of it.

Mr. F. M. Burke, referring to the same matter, asked if the Premier would take steps for the introduction of a betterment tax, in order to allow the State to benefit from the unearned increment which landowners would obtain as a result of lines running through their properties.

"I will give full consideration to that when preparing my next financial statement," replied Mr. Holman.

RAILWAY SUPERANNUATION FUND.

Answering Mr. Mutch, the Premier said there was no legal difficulty in the way of refunding superannuation contributions to employees of the Railway and Tramway Department. But there were certain financial obstacles owing to the amount to be paid out, no provision having been made for it. The Cabinet was considering it. They hoped to be able to pay it all very soon, but if not discrimination would be made in the cases of those who were actually in need of the money.

GAS COMPANY SHAREHOLDERS.

Mr. Dooley was asked by the Minister for Labour and Industry to give notice of a question asking for a list of the shareholders in the gas companies that were to benefit by the bill then before the House.

MR. HUGHES AND THE WAR COUNCIL.

Mr. Gardiner asked if the Premier would make a protest against the representation of Australia at the Imperial War Council by any other than an Australian-born, and thus endeavour to prevent Australia being represented by a Welshman, Mr. Hughes.

The Premier asked for notice of the question.

DULWICH HILL ORANGEMEN.

Mr. Keegan asked the Premier if he had seen a report of a meeting held at Dulwich Hill, at which members of that House had declared that certain "sects" of the community were in danger of having their rights taken away by certain other "sects." Would the Premier appoint a committee to inquire into the allegations made?

Mr. Holman: I have not seen the report referred to, but I make it a rule never to attach any undue importance to anything said at Dulwich Hill. I know of no part of the metropolis where inflammatory statements are more frequent or more violent. (Laughter.)

Mr. F. M. Burke: Do you propose to follow the ordinary practice and arrange a public welcome to that great prelate of Australia, Dr. Mannix, on the occasion of his promised visit to this State?

Mr. Holman: I must ask you to give me notice of that question.

COASTAL SHIPPING TONNAGE.

Replying to Dr. Arthur, who enumerated a list of the ships engaged in the Australian coastal trade, the Premier said he had been informed that the matter of using some of them for the carriage of foodstuffs overseas was actively engaging the attention of the Commonwealth Government.

ELECTORAL ROLLS.

Mr. Lang was informed by the Chief Secretary, Mr. Fuller, that in the interest of economy it had been decided to suspend the collection of the electoral rolls by the police for 1918. Parliament would later be asked to validate the action. This would save between £10,000 and £12,000.

EMPLOYMENT ON TRAMWAYS.

Mr. Estell asked the Minister for Railways if he would use his best endeavours to have reinstated a large number of former tramway employees who were still idle, and also prevent the employment of boys of 18 years of age and upwards at an average of 6s per day, when the award rate before the strike was 9s 3d, and the minimum age 21.

The Minister for Railways (Mr. Ball) promised to make representations to the Railway Commissioners with a view to getting a report on the matter.

ANOTHER STRIKE ECHO.

Mr. Bruntnell asked whether it was a fact that the Railway Commissioners guaranteed during the strike the positions of the men who remained loyal to the department, and if such were the case, whether the Minister for Railways was aware that the Commissioners were dismissing such men. (Opposition applause.)

The Minister for Railways replied that he was unaware of the dismissal of such men if they were able to comply with the conditions laid down by the Commissioners when they were taken on.

NOTHING TO WITHDRAW.

Mr. Dooley said that in a statement made some time ago the Chief Secretary said certain people in the industrial organisations were receiving German gold. As a trial had taken place in which it was proved that people in the industrial organisations were not receiving German gold, would the Chief Secretary withdraw his statement, and apologise for it.

The Chief Secretary: I do not propose to withdraw anything I said on that occasion. (Ministerial cheers.)

GAS ACT AMENDMENT BILL.

The Minister for Labour and Industry (Mr. Beeby), in moving the second reading of the Gas Act Amendment Bill, referred at the outset to the 1912 Act, and said that, for the first time in the history of the State, they then brought the operations of gas companies under legislative control. It was then realised that whenever a trading concern relied on the franchise granted by the State and on a privilege such as that which existed in the case of the gas companies, and where such undertaking had been the result of that privilege, there should be some reasonable regulation of its affairs. There was no interference in the bill with the general principle of the Act,—i.e., that all profits must be carried into distinct and separate accounts; that the whole of the operations must be in broad daylight; that there must be no special or secret reserve funds, and that the rate of interest must bear some relation to the price charged to the community. The proposed amendment arose not from any desire to touch the principle of the Act, but to meet a new set of circumstances which had undoubtedly arisen owing to war conditions. A gas company in that respect was in a different position from any ordinary private trading concern. The latter was not interfered with by legislation. If its material increased in cost, or if it had a difficulty in raising capital, it could adjust its charges to meet any such conditions, but under the Gas Act a company was powerless to meet any extraordinary emergency that might arise. The operations of the company were kept within a certain field, and so long as Parliament controlled the operations of a concern of that kind it must at least give to those concerned the same reasonable latitude to meet extraordinary conditions as was given to ordinary private undertakings.

Three difficulties had arisen owing to war conditions. The gas companies—and this was more in respect to the large metropolitan companies—were unable to obtain additional capital at the rate of interest provided under the Act. That fixed the rate of interest at which new capital might be raised at 7 per cent. The companies, however, found they were unable to raise it at that rate. The first proposal was to meet the difficulty and to provide that, in the future a company might be able to raise its new capital at a slightly higher rate. The new capital would be raised at 8 per cent. instead of 7 per cent.

"What is the new capital wanted for?" inquired Mr. Osborne.

Mr. Beeby said a company could expand only by medium of new capital. There were before the gas companies over 2000 applications for gas connections, and that work could be done only by the expenditure of new capital. The company at present was operating very largely on short-dated loans. It had since 1912 borrowed in various forms over £400,000 on short-dated loans, and it also had maturing in the next 18 months over £800,000 covered by debentures. The actual floating capital which the company was using to-day and which it had used in expansion was nearly a million and a quarter of money, on which it paid interest. They had that money at a reasonably low rate of interest, but as these amounts fell due they could not, owing to the present condition of the money market, renew their loans at the same rate of interest. Their proposal was that they should be able to offer to the public a reasonable investment at a higher rate of interest. Mr. Ryan, the Premier of Queensland, had passed recently an Act under which he allowed a company 8½ per cent. dividend on its assets as invested. The price per 1000ft in Queensland was 6/. Again, where Mr. Ryan sought 8½ per cent. under his measure they were asking under the bill now before the House 8 per cent. Here to-day the price of gas was 4/1½. The bill did not in any way propose to confer some extraordinary privilege on these companies; all it proposed to do was to meet fairly and honestly new conditions which had arisen.

Mr. Lang: Coal is cheaper in Queensland than it is here.

Mr. Beeby: Then why is gas 6s per 1000ft.? Continuing, he pointed out that they said in effect in connection with the bill under review: "While we allow you to meet new conditions which have arisen, we think it is not a fair thing to ask for a 10 per cent. dividend, and we propose that on four-fifths of the capital the dividend shall be reduced from 10 per cent. to 8 per cent."

Mr. Beeby went on to say that in Adelaide the price of gas was 6s per 1000ft; in Brisbane South it was 6s 8d, less 10 per cent.; and in Melbourne it was 4s 7d. Further, in Melbourne, the companies received for their residuals a very much higher price than was the case in this State. If the company in this State got the same price for its residuals as did the Melbourne Gas Company the difference would be £80,000 on its profit and loss account. Setting the high price of residuals against the increased cost of coal, the gas company was at a disadvantage, yet the Victorian company charged 4s 7d as against 4s 1½d here.

In addition to the difficulty as to capital, there had been a very substantial increase since the passage of the 1912 Act, in the cost of all classes of material. Coal, oil, machinery, plant, everything had enormously increased. If there was an increase in the labour cost the company could, under the 1912 Act, get the benefit of it. If the labour cost increased the company could, under the 1912 Act, refer the matter to the Court; the Court could ascertain the extent of the increase, and could declare that the selling price of gas should be increased. They now said under the present bill that, in addition to the labour cost, the Court should take into consideration all increases in the cost of material arising from war conditions.

Dr. Arthur interposed with an expression of the hope that this would not be an inquiry such as the ferries' inquiry. (Laughter.)

Mr. Beeby pointed out that the conditions were different as applying to the gas companies, because of the legislation under which they operated. A company could not, if the bill were passed, raise the price of gas without a full inquiry before a Judge of the Supreme Court—the same tribunal as existed under the present law.

Under the Act the power to write off amounts for depreciation was arbitrary, continued Mr. Beeby. The proposal by the Government was to check the position and to let the public understand clearly every year what the amount was to be written off for depreciation. A difficulty under the original Act was that the actual financial position of the company might never be known, for no control over writing off was provided. The new measure, however, provided that no more than 3½ per cent. could be written off for general purposes and depreciation—the former 1½ per cent. and the latter 2 per cent. The renewals account to the old Act could not exceed 10 per cent.; the new measure provided that the special purposes and depreciation account together should not exceed 10 per cent. The result would be that the operations of the company would be before the public, and there could be no doubt as to where the profits went, or how the concern stood, for every farthing would be accounted for.

The alterations proposed in respect of dividends were important. The original Act restricted the dividend to 10 per cent., unless the price of gas was reduced; the dividend could rise to 11 per cent. if the price was reduced 4d per 1000 cubic feet. The proposal in the new measure was that the interest on the original capital, which was about £1,500,000, should be reduced to 8 per cent., and the 7 per cent. now paid on "B" shares should be raised to 8 per cent. The company could, however, issue preference capital at 7½ per cent., which was, however, not a matter for the public. The reduction of the dividend on the original capital from 10 per cent. to 8 per cent. was a substantial concession to the public. The only way by which the company could pay more than 8 per cent. would be by reducing the price of gas.

He did not think it was for him to prophesy as to whether the result of the bill would be an increase in the price of gas. That was a matter which could only be determined on an inquiry by experts.

Mr. Mutch: Cannot that be ascertained before the Act is passed?

Mr. Beeby said the principle of public inquiry was maintained; it was a principle recognised in all countries in connection with public utility companies. The onus of proof that an increase was necessary rested on the company. The gas companies were not themselves sure how the new proposals would affect their interests, but the measure attempted to deal fairly between the companies and the public. They had to be made attractive to capital that was looking for investment. The expansion of the equipment was held up for want of capital owing to the restrictions imposed by the 1912 Act, and so the bill, without giving any undue preference, was intended to enable that expansion to take place and to hold the scales fairly between the company and the public.

THE OPPOSITION ATTITUDE.

Mr. John Storey, leader of the Opposition, said that throughout its history the Australian Gaslight Company had had no cause for complaint against Parliament, for it had been benevolently treated. The original capital was considerably less than £1,000,000, but it now had assets worth nearly £4,000,000. Assets, indeed, had accumulated to such an extent that they had been converted into capital and dividends had been paid upon them. It was not an altruistic institution, and did not deal with the public with the same generous spirit with which the public had treated it. Why should not the Government take it over in the same way as it did the water supply? He knew of no reason why the bill was wanted, except to raise the price of gas. The shares had risen 7s 6d since it became certain that this bill was to be introduced. Because it firmly believed the intention of the bill was to increase the price of gas the Opposition would oppose it at every stage.

BILL JUSTIFIED.

Mr. Cocks said that the accumulation of undivided profits in the past, instead of being cause for adverse criticism was to the credit of the company, for it was thereby enabled to expand the public utility which it was created to supply. The bill provided ample safeguards for the consumers. Under the sliding scale, for instance, when normal conditions were again reached, and the price of material went down, the consumer was to participate in the advantages of such reduction.

Mr. Osborne contended that the bill did not disclose any evidence of a desire to safeguard the consuming public.

PREMIER DEFENDS BILL.

The Premier (Mr. Holman) said that as all idea of the Government undertaking the lighting of the city must be dismissed, they had to consider the possibility of permitting those who were now operating to continue that work. Any discussion as to the manner in which the company had arrived at its present position was not practicable; the company was there; there was the fact also that it was the sole agency by which the lighting of Sydney could be performed. They were now face to face with the point that unless some step were taken the lighting of Sydney would cease. It would cease over a wide area. It might cease altogether, and it would certainly cease over the new areas of expansion, if, as he had said, some step were not taken. Taking the company's working funds, £400,000 was actually at call; another £400,000 was over short periods, and about £800,000 was borrowed money on debentures. None of that was share capital. The company had to meet the financial problem involved in the fact that its borrowings were now falling due, and had to be repaid. There was also the industrial problem involved in the fact that it had to extend greatly the area of its operations. For both purposes it must obtain additional share capital. If the company was to get money it must be allowed to offer to the investor something that would attract him. When they found that New South Wales was paying practically 6½ per cent. on the London market where, before the war, it paid 4 per cent.—and this was not the maximum, but was a definitely-pledged payment every year—they would see that some corresponding rise must be made if a big private company was to make a flotation successfully. A rise of 1 per cent. was a very fair thing.

Mr. Osborne: You admit it will have to be provided by the consumer.

The Premier said that if there was a definite increase in the interest rate and a definite increase also in the cost of labour and of materials, the payment by the consumer of those increased costs was unavoidable. The company had had a difficulty in making any flotations at 7 per cent. even before the war broke out. The question was: Were they to carry on this service under war conditions or were they to go without lighting?

Mr. Brookfield: Has any inquiry been made as to whether the price of coal could be reduced?

Mr. Holman: What has that to do with this bill? The price of coal might be fixed in many ways. If it was reduced the gas consumers would get the advantage, because it was one of the elements that would enter into the inquiry before the Judge.

The Government was not in a position to take this utility service over, Mr. Holman continued, and the company was unable to go on with its contract without more capital, which could be obtained only by an amendment of the existing legislation. Inquiries by Mr. Beeby and himself had established on the best of authority that 8 per cent. was the best price at which money could be secured.

Mr. John Storey: The Opposition are not concerned with the loan aspect; they are mostly concerned with the standard price going from 3s 6d to 4s 1½d, and so becoming prohibitive. We ask you to show if there is any danger of an increase in price.

Mr. Holman said that whether there should be an increase had to be determined by a Judge, and there would be a new element to be considered. Under the 1912 Act the only element was an increase in the cost of labour. This new measure also included the increased cost of materials, the prices for which had risen considerably since the commencement of the war. That was the only change that would be against the consumer, but the Government felt compelled to allow the company to secure an increase in the standard price on the basis of the increase in the price of materials as well as of labour.

Mr. Davies: Why not inquire into the price of coal?

Mr. Holman said that if the price of coal could be reduced the public would get the advantage. The company set up what appeared to him to be an unanswerable case that it could not carry on without the power to secure an alteration in the standard price. The inquiry would start from the standard price of 3s 6d, and how could the consideration of the increased cost of materials be avoided?

Mr. Osborne: We do not dispute that there have been reduced profits, but still we say the increased cost of production should come out of profits, and not from the consumer.

Mr. Holman said that if there were accumulated profits he would agree to the taxation of them. But the company had reached a position which would become a crisis in a few months if not properly handled. The bill was not intended to guarantee anything from the Government.

At midnight Mr. Dooley moved an amendment,—"That the bill be referred for consideration and report to a select committee, consisting of Messrs. Beeby, Bruntnell, Mutch, F. M. Burke, Hickey, Perry, Dr. Arthur, and the mover."

At 1.15 a.m. the House divided on Mr. Dooley's amendment, which was defeated by 38 to 28 votes. Mr. Price voted for the amendment.

The second reading was carried on a similar division, the bill was formally taken into committee, and the debate adjourned until to-day.

The House at 1.25 a.m. adjourned until 4.30 p.m.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

COST OF PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEM.

The sitting of the Legislative Council was a very short one.

The Aborigines Protection Amendment Bill passed through the final stage. Consideration of the Western Lands Amendment Bill and the Judges Retirement Bill was postponed. The Sydney Corporation (Declaratory) Bill was advanced to the second reading and committee stages.

Mr. Fitzgerald gave notice of his intention to bring in an enabling bill, under which the Glebe Municipal Council would have authority to extend its powers of borrowing.

Mr. Dick's motion that the Synod of Eastern Australia Property Bill be referred to a select committee was carried.

Mr. Fitzgerald, as the representative of the Government, asked for notice of a question by Mr. Waddell in regard to the powers of the Public Service Board in fixing the salaries of Public school teachers.

The adjournement was till Tuesday next.

AMERICA.

HEART AND SOUL IN THE WAR

"America is heart and soul in the business of the war," said Mr. Frank Coffee, who has just returned from a visit to the United States and Canada, yesterday.

Mr. Coffee said that the Americans, excepting only those of German extraction, were backing up President Wilson almost to a man. There was real war enthusiasm, and the spirit everywhere manifested was that of unconquerable determination. Every household that had sent a soldier to the war proudly displayed a flag with a star on it, and where two soldiers had gone there were two stars on the flag. About 10,000,000 people had signed the self-denial pledge to economise in food, clothing, and amusement. There were two meatless days a week, and one day in which wheatless bread was eaten. It was astonishing how everybody had gone in for sacrifice. The hotels and restaurants had cut down their menus in length, and the campaign of economy was religiously observed in houses also. It was considered a crime to waste anything. There had been a big drop in attendances at theatres, probably due to the disposition of the people to save money; but the picture shows had not suffered. They were booming. The Government was severe on slackers who sought to evade service. They received sentences in some cases of two years, and in a few cases up to five years.

Shipbuilding was, Mr. Coffee went on to say, very active on the Pacific Coast, and sailors were scarce. The British Consul at San Francisco would not give permission to British sailors to accept employment on American ships, and in consequence many were taking out naturalisation papers. One Australian company had recently launched three steam schooners in San Francisco, and was reported to have secured under charters over 100 ships for the next 12 months.

Reverting to the war, Mr. Coffee remarked "There is a general feeling in America that the war is going to be finished in the air, and the authorities are working to that end."

AMERICAN PASSPORTS.

American citizens who hold departmental passports which have not expired, and who do not intend to return to the United States until after July 2, 1918, should apply through the American Consulate-General in Sydney for new departmental passports, as passports which they hold will not be valid after July 2, 1918, notwithstanding the fact that they may have been issued within the last few months. This, in consequence of a new form of passport having replaced the old form.

American citizens who are called to America suddenly, and have proper proof of citizenship, may obtain emergency passports from the American Consul-General at Sydney.

Aliens who contemplate visiting the United States or calling at any American port should bring to the American Consulate-General three unmounted photographs not exceeding three inches square, as those printed on cardboard or postcards cannot be accepted.

JUDGE'S SEAT QUESTIONED.

BRISBANE, Tuesday.

The Full Court, by a majority judgment, to-day decided that in their opinion Mr. Justice M'Cawley was not entitled to have the oaths of office administered to him or to take his seat as a member of the Supreme Court. The Attorney-General (Mr. Ryan) asked for leave to appeal to the High Court. This was granted.

RED CROSS SOCIETY.

The weekly meeting of the general committee of the New South Wales division of the Australian branch of the British Red Cross Society will be held at 3 p.m. to-day at Primrose-buildings, 255A George-street. Mrs. M'Kinnon will address the meeting.

ASH WEDNESDAY.

To-day is Ash Wednesday, which marks the beginning of Lent. Although a good deal of the old-time observance of these days has been discontinued, especially in Protestant churches, Ash Wednesday is still regarded as a day of penitence, both in the Church of England and in Roman Catholic communities, and in many churches Holy Communion and special services will be held.

GREATER SYDNEY.

PROVISIONS OF THE BILL.

The Premier, Mr. Holman, replying to a deputation yesterday, definitely promised that as soon as the present short session was finished, he would get the Cabinet seriously to consider the Greater Sydney Bill, which had been prepared by a previous Government, and which, though not yet adopted by the present Government, would form a basis for the Cabinet's deliberations.

The deputation represented the Town Planning Association, the Institute of Surveyors, the Institute of Architects, the N.S.W. Branch of the Engineering Association of Australia, and the Electrical Association of New South Wales.

The Premier said he and his colleagues were entirely in accord with the sentiments of the deputation. When the Nationalist party was formed some 15 months ago two matters they were agreed on were the Greater Sydney and Greater Newcastle schemes. He was quite prepared to say definitely that it was part of their policy, and that as soon as the present short session was ended he would ask the Cabinet to seriously consider the bill. The bill that had been prepared would be the basis for the deliberations of the Cabinet.

The Minister in charge of Local Government, Mr. J. D. Fitzgerald, also replied. He said under the bill the Greater Sydney Council would take in from North Sydney to Parramatta. There would be two zones—an inner and an outer. The inner zone would be incorporated in the Greater Sydney. The central council would control town planning, main roads, and public health. They had not got one really decent road in Sydney. Under the bill the Government, with the Greater Sydney Council, would be able to create a Town Planning Civic Commission, consisting of the Lord Mayor, an alderman, architect, and surveyor, and three would be appointed by the Government. These men, with the exception of the Lord Mayor and alderman, would be experts. They would be able under the bill to regulate the subdivision of estates; they would have power to classify districts under residential, factory, and noxious trades areas. The building section was quite up to date. Provision was made for developmental schemes in advance of settlement; power would be provided for the voluntary pooling of lands, and power would also be given to compel owners to pool their property. Of course, compensation would be paid where the owners suffered. Then there was the question of realignment. Paris had been realigned 100 years ago in advance. In the Greater Sydney Bill they said 50 years. If they had a realignment plan of Sydney they would be able to provide for magnificent streets and avenues. If that plan were obtained they could work on it in the future. Concluding, Mr. Fitzgerald said the Government would be asked to consider a town planning measure for the whole of the State of New South Wales of a model character.

FARMER'S DEATH.

EVIDENCE OF FOUL PLAY.

WAGGA, Tuesday.

The death of a Coolamon district farmer has occurred under unusual circumstances. Patrick James Curran, a single man, 33 years of age, came to Wagga last Wednesday evening with a friend, whose wife is in a private hospital. Curran informed his mother that he might not return for a week, and intended having a suit made; also that he would have his teeth attended to. For this purpose and other expenses he carried with him about £60. On Thursday and Friday Curran, accompanied by a friend, paid several visits to the hospital, and disappeared from the front of the hospital, where he promised to wait. He was not seen alive again.

Just before midnight of Friday a man, when crossing Hampden bridge over the Murrumbidgee River, heard a voice calling for help. The voice apparently came from the river. A man named Clarke states he was afterwards joined by two others, and again the voice called out, "Get a rope and save me; I am nearly done." Clarke called out: "Where are you?" and the voice replied, "On a log in the river. Get a rope, quick." The men ran across the bridge and along the river bank, but failed to find any trace of the man. The police arrived, and searched the spot for several hours, without success. The belief was expressed that someone had been playing a joke. The police, however, continued their search, and a black tracker at last discovered the body of the missing man, Curran, on a snag close to the spot where the men heard a voice calling on Friday night last.

These particulars were elicited at an inquest yesterday afternoon. The doctor's evidence showed that the man's death had been due to exhaustion, and the face, throat, eyes, and tongue bore traces favouring the theory that the man had been garotted before entering the river. The police applied for an adjournment to complete their investigations. The man was fully dressed when recovered from the water. Only £1 was found in a pocket of the clothes.

SCHOONER WRECKED.

ON A REEF AT APIA.

According to advices received yesterday from San Francisco the schooner Mahukona has been wrecked on the outer reef at Apia, Samoa.

The Mahukona was being towed when the hawser parted, and before a fresh line could be put aboard she was piled up on the reef.

The Mahukona was loaded with copra, and this was all washed out of the vessel's hold and lost.

DR. KELLY'S LENTEN PASTORAL

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—We shall all cordially sympathise with Dr. Kelly's anxiety concerning the moral condition of the community, his complaint of the atmosphere of the time, in spite of the war, being so much "affected by worldliness, frivolity, and laxity." And if we all, of whatever faith, could permit ourselves to combine in the endeavour to check the too prevalent "love of pleasure—the literature that is destructive to virtue, and amusements that are dangerous even to children," how glad we should be to find ourselves associated in such a campaign with so powerful and eloquent an ally as the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Sydney.

But why does the Archbishop herein turn against the large section of the community—larger than his own—who are equally concerned with himself about the situation, and share his moral solicitude to the full?

We must not quarrel with him nor with his people about their religion. We who have given disciplined study to that subject know how much its advocates have to allege in its favour, and with what saintliness and beauty its profession has so often been adorned.

But why need he bring against a large body of Christian men, not less intelligent or devout than himself and his people, charges so fearful, and use concerning them words so unkindly, as those of his Lenten pastoral?

Dr. Kelly is at no pains to discriminate here. He charged "those who stand against the Roman Church"—those whose teaching, that is, varies from his own—with, I scarce know how to transcribe his unkindly language! He accuses us, who can give the best reasons why we do not agree with him, with "human pride and malice," with "using pleasing falsehoods on deceitful tongues," and I know not what other vices of the soul. This, he tells us, is "the reign of Anti-Christ." He warned his people that they find themselves as "sheep in the midst of wolves," and counsels them to discern those who "approach their souls with deadly stealth."

One is amazed at this language. The good bishop does not distinguish. The mixed marriage, the secular school, and "those who would fain usurp the place of the chief pastors" of his Church: we are all indiscriminately huddled together with those who are "driving society backward into paganism, sensualism, tyranny, and disruption."

I have been myself a Christian minister for 50 years. I am a convinced Protestant. And I resent equally for myself and my Protestant brethren this false witness brought by the good bishop against his neighbours and his fellow man. I do not question his piety and his deep sincerity. Why need he question ours?

I am replying, of course, to the startlingly unjust attack made by Dr. Kelly on us Protestant ministers. In the closing sentences of his address, however, he makes an appeal, not without its tender human side, to his own people. Into that domestic circle it seems hardly right that one should intrude. But it reveals the better element in the prelate's mind. "Let us believe in Christ as the lover of all mankind. Let us endeavour to abound in good works towards all, using forbearance with antagonists and gratitude towards friends."

Here speaks, indeed, the human feeling of a generous heart. But why this altered note? Why should Protestant ministers be permitted no share in this humane feeling? "Am I not also a man and a brother?" Let us not mistake. Our people—our Protestant fellow-citizens—will not accept this unnatural segregation of their Protestant pastors from themselves. Our principles, our faith, our testimony are one.

I am, etc.,
THOMAS ROSEBY, LL.D.

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

Richmond Pony Club will hold a race meeting to-day at the Londonderry course. A number of the best of the metropolitan horses are engaged, and special trains will leave Sydney at 9.25 (horses), 10.15, and 11.25.

It was anticipated that the New Zealand mare Desert Gold would not start in the Newmarket or the Australian Cup, and her name was struck out of both races yesterday.

"Wager" (Neutral Bay).—Eurobin won the Doncaster Handicap in 1916.

The withdrawals of Brisëis and Some Boy from the Oakleigh Plate and Newmarket Handicap will cause disappointment to numerous backers. Both horses were coupled with prominent horses for the Newmarket-Australian Cup double; and they were supported straight out for both the short races.

"Tattersall" (City); and "X.S." (Paddington).—Glen Hamilton started at 4 to 1 against in the Flying Handicap at Uralla on February 8 (second day).

The final acceptances yesterday for the Oakleigh Plate number 27, one fewer than last year, and for the Futurity Stakes the number falls three short.

RANDWICK TRAINING NOTES.

The outside portion of the Randwick course proper was open for special gallops yesterday morning. Redfern went at three-parts pace for six furlongs. Kandos and The Fortune Hunter disposed of a mile and a furlong in 2m 1½s. George Graves and Baltic Sea travelled three-quarters of a mile in even time. Franco and Golden Bronze were not fully extended to put six furlongs past in 1m 23s. Most of the general work was done on the magpie grass track.

The Christian Brother and Ursula ran three-quarters of a mile in 1m 19s. Ablaze spurted four furlongs in 53s, and First Lesson ran a steady mile. Polymite was not extended over five furlongs. Thana and Medley ran three-quarters of a mile steadily. Giru finished useful work with a spurt. Mythic and Miss Simper put five furlongs past in 1m 6s. Tonio and another registered seven furlongs in 1m 34s. Bee went at half pace, and Primus got over six furlongs in 1m 22s. A trifling further distance was run by Miss Tressady in 1m 41s. Joe Gunn's work was five furlongs in 1m 6s. Admiral Beatty ran a useful task on the tan track, and among others to put in steady work were Franzar, Bee, Westcourt, Glenquinn, Quirindi, King Mostyn, Samuel, Toronepel, and True Flavour.

VICTORIAN TRAINING NOTES.

CAULFIELD.

CETIGNE GOES WELL.

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

A most disagreeable hot north wind was blowing this morning. It brought up clouds of dust, and it was impossible to see half-way across the course at times. Although the grass was fast, it was neutralised by a strong head wind. Panacre was ridden out to run six furlongs in 1m 18s, the first four taking 50s. Cetigne just beat Amadis over seven furlongs in 1m 30s, and it was a good gallop, as the wind was blowing its strongest at the time. Red Rock slipped over six furlongs in 1m 20s. Bullock had to keep Que Sera going for the last four furlongs of his gallop up the side in 51s, as the horse appeared to be loafing. Good Day and Kill 'Em spurted five furlongs in 1m 5s; and Perdo put up the same time. Bardol and Wallachia were companions for six furlongs in 1m 23½s, and Hopriq and Susarian left six furlongs behind in 1m 21s. Alegar beat Barley Prince badly over five furlongs in 1m 6½s; Kiltoyle went smartly untimed; Poitrel ran a mile in 1m 56½s, and Mazarron did a furlong less in 1m 37s. Metaphrast and Northern Crown spurted five furlongs in 1m 7s. The Hague and Farivale were together at the end of five furlongs in 1m 3¾s; Red Fox beat Palm Leaf by three lengths, with Eastern Star a long way in the rear, at the finish of four furlongs in 50½s—a good gallop, considering the wind. Poitrina went in her usual taking style for five furlongs in 1m 4½s; and she did it without much effort. In a rattling good finish, Alcconner beat Yoorala by a long head over five furlongs in 1m 3½s; Remmon also went over the same ground in exactly the same time, and they were two good gallops. Belgium Waif beat Nairn badly over six furlongs in 1m 19½s; Two Blues was let off with an easy-run mile in 1m 50½s; Delinacre got the better of a bad start, and led Duntulm, Pistolaire, Afflatus, and Problema in that order all the way for five furlongs in 1m 3½s, the last four furlongs taking 50½s. Dependence was 1m 4¾s running seven furlongs; Vaquero never gave Defence and Semi Blue a look in at any part of a mile and a quarter in the fast time of 2m 9½s, Defence registering 2m 14¾s, and Semi Blue 2m 17½s; but it is more than likely that the winner was shoeless. He ran his first mile in 1m 42½s. Divine Comedy and Harp of the North spurted a couple of furlongs in 25½s; Lord Marco was getting very tired at the end of six furlongs in 1m 21s, the first three being run in 37½s. Master Verdun beat Pardart over five furlongs in 1m 7s; and Pieman was 1m 6s, and Comedy Queen 1m 11¾s. Gorner Block and Dimidul did it in even time. Ashview and The Tartan gelding ran six furlongs in 1m 21½s; River Nook did long, strong work. Beltane covered a mile in 1m 46½s, and had the help of Kilfinn over the last seven furlongs. Wedge was let off with an easy task—six furlongs in 1m 26s; Fireworks and Sederick made their way over a mile in 1m 52½s; First Bid took 1m 54s, and Firebrick, 1m 58s. Kilboy cantered, and Three was similarly employed; Patrobas had no trouble in running a mile in 1m 49½s; Half a Glass went steadily.

INTERMEDIATE SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS

METROPOLITAN BOYS.

Appended are the results of the intermediate certificate examination for boys in the metropolitan district and for Parramatta candidates. The award of this certificate marks the successful completion of the first two years' work of the secondary school course. A special feature of the examination is that candidates must not only pass a test in at least four subjects, but must show by their written work, as well as by their school reports, that they have satisfactorily followed the subjects of their course of study other than those in which their examination has been passed.

The subjects of examination are arranged in 28 sections, and the numbers in the list of successful candidates refer to the following sections:—(1) English, (2) history, (3) geography, (4) mathematics I., (5) mathematics II., (6) Latin, (7) French, (8) German, (9) physics, (10) chemistry, (11) physics and chemistry, (12) botany, (13) geology, (14) business principles, (15) woodwork, (16) metalwork, (17) industrial drawing, (18) mechanical drawing, (19) art, (20) music, (21) needlework, (22) Greek, (23) shorthand, (24) physiology, (25) agricultural botany, (26) agriculture I., (27) agriculture II., (28) practical agriculture.

The schools are printed in alphabetical order, and the names of candidates who passed are also arranged alphabetically. The pass list for country candidates and the result of the competition for entrance to the Public Service as determined by the intermediate examination will be announced to-morrow.

Candidates are divided into two classes (A and B) in each subject, the A pass being the higher.

CURATIVE WORKSHOPS.

Military orthopaedics as a special department of surgical practice has arisen during the course of this war, and its importance has grown as each month passes and the number of the maimed and broken soldiers mounts up.

Dr. W. Colin Mackenzie, lecturer on anatomy at the Melbourne University, who has for the past two years been a member of the surgical staff of the Military Orthopaedic Hospital at Shepherd's Bush, London, has arrived in Sydney, en route to his home. He explained yesterday that orthopaedic cases comprised in one form or another a large proportion of the men invalided home with severe surgical injuries, such as derangements and disabilities of joints, deformities, and nerve injuries, and said that experience had shown the great value of curative workshops as an integral part of treatment. These curative industries served a twofold purpose. First of all they were directly curative by giving exercise, under the surgeon's control and supervision, to the affected part. They were also indirectly curative through their profound psychological influence upon the patient. Apathy and inertia were replaced by bodily and mental activity. In the second place, these industries enabled a certain number of the men to acquire a craft or trade by which they would become more valuable to the community by the increase of their wage-earning capacity after discharge. The curative workshops were an important evolution of the war. In each orthopaedic centre in Great Britain they formed an essential part of the treatment, with local differences, dependent on the character and staple trade of the district. For example, in Aberdeen a net-making industry had proved highly successful, and in Bristol basket-making. Men were given a definite, regular, interesting occupation, and energy instead of being wasted was directed to serve some useful purpose.

The pioneer work in orthopaedic surgery, upon which all modern practice was based, had been done in England. In particular the name of the late Hugh Owen Thomas was honoured wherever the surgery of deformities was practised. When the British Army Council decided to organise the care and treatment of the deformed soldier upon a large scale, it was inevitable that Robert Jones, whose name was bound up with the modern surgery of nerve and muscle injury, should have been appointed Inspector-General of Military Orthopaedics.

Dr. Mackenzie said he found that at the front the work of Australian pathologists was regarded as equal to the work of the men of any country in the world.

Dr. Mackenzie will leave for Melbourne this evening.

FINANCIAL.

NEXT WAR LOAN.

QUESTION OF INTEREST.

A correspondent writes, pointing out that we omitted one source of complexity in connection with the dual interest rate that the new war loan is expected to carry. He says that something depends upon the State income tax, and that what a man pays to the State commissioners will have to be taken into consideration. He further points out that as no two States charge precisely the same rate this makes a further complexity. This is, however, not really so. Though the next Federal war loan is likely to be issued partly tax-free and partly tax-bearing, that does not mean that the latter will be subject to State income tax. No Commonwealth stock is so liable nor could it be made so, except by express stipulation of the Federal legislature. When it is proposed to make the war loan bear taxes this is limited to Federal taxes. Our correspondent's contention thus falls to the ground, and it is well that it does so, for the position is difficult enough without further complication. Quite apart from the legal position the Commonwealth and State Treasurers agreed at one of their periodic conferences not to attempt to tax one another's securities. This agreement was arrived at because there was some doubt, not as to whether the States could tax Commonwealth stock but whether the Commonwealth could tax State stock. Constitutionally, probably neither is taxable in any circumstances, that is, without consent. Where the State taxes do come in is where the taxpayer pays, say, 5/ in the £ State and Federal taxes upon some investment wholly unconnected with the war loans, say, on mortgages; and he is considering calling them up and investing his money in war loan stock. A man in such a position would certainly find it advantageous to take tax-free stock, unless the interest rate payable on tax-bearing stock were much higher than it is likely to be.

INDUSTRIAL AND P.P.B.B. AND S.

The report of the above society shows a surplus for the year of £1?3?, after providing 7 per cent. on the paid-up shares. Of this amount the board proposes to transfer £500 to the contingent fund, making it £2000, and £223 to the reserve fund, increasing it to £18,500, and to pay a bonus of 1 per cent. to paid-up shareholders.

WAR LOAN AND WAR PROFITS.

"Farmer" writes:—

Sir,—I notice that applications are shortly to be invited for contributions to another War Loan, but I am satisfied that its success is going to be very much interfered by the uncertainty that exists as to the amount that a portion of taxpayers will be liable for under the War Profits Tax. Information is being asked for that in many instances it will be impossible to obtain correctly. It is a scandal that some way cannot be found of relieving taxpayers of the necessity of sending in so many returns. No sooner is one posted than another one has to be prepared. Then the expense taxpayers are put to in obtaining expert advice in making up their returns is considerable. Much as I should like to subscribe to the War Loan it will have to wait until some finality is reached regarding the War Profits Tax.

MISCELLANEOUS QUERIES.

"M.C." (Leichhardt).—10 per cent. Federal income tax, plus 10 per cent. Tasmanian income tax.

THE MORATORIUM.

"Bondi."—Yes, unless deposited with a bank, in which case, no.

VALUE FOR DUTY.

CUSTOMS HOUSE AND IMPORTERS.

On October 20 last the president of the Sydney Chamber of Commerce, Mr. A. A. C. Cocks, put the following questions to the Comptroller-General of Customs:—

1. May we assume that the new arrangement in regard to the duty on invoice instead of the date of shipment prevailing comes into operation from the date of your letter, viz., October 20?

2. In respect to the new declaration required from exporters from Great Britain, would you kindly state when this becomes an imperative condition, bearing in mind the irregularity of the posts and the increased difficulties of communication as between importers in Australia and their sources of supply in Great Britain and other countries.

3. During the period dating from October 20 (the date of your letter), and the date you decide upon for the bringing in of the regulation referred to in question 2, could you give some indication of the mode of procedure that will be adopted by the department to provide smooth running facilities as between the importers and your department, to comply with the spirit of the new regulation prior to its being a compulsory enactment?

4. In view of the decision arrived at and contained in your letter of October 20, would it not be a fair concession on the part of your department to abandon the various demands that have been made upon importers for posts on importations that have been made in good faith, and upon which the department has demanded duty on a re-value basis?

5. Your attention is respectfully called to the fact that your department has been making demands for posts on goods imported beyond the period of 12 months specified in the Customs Act, and the various commercial associations feel that, always assuming that there has been no intentional disregard of the regulations of the department relative to such importations, such posts represent an element of injustice in as much as in many instances the cost of the goods has been calculated on the duty paid, and the goods have been disposed of. Consequently a surcharge or post on a re-valued basis for goods that have already been sold is an irrevocable loss to the merchant, and should not be associated with any bona-fide transactions between the department and importers.

The Acting Comptroller has now replied:—

"1. The new arrangement in regard to acceptance of duty on the basis of the home consumption value in the country of export at date of invoice, instead of at date of actual shipment, actually became operative on October 26 last.

"2. No date has yet been fixed from which it will be imperative for importers to produce invoices bearing the new declaration under reference.

"3. In view of the war conditions, reasonable consideration has been, and will be, given in those cases in which importers were unable to produce invoices with declaration in the revised terms. Regard will be paid, of course, to the merits of individual cases.

"4-5. I have gone very carefully through all the papers bearing on this subject and have since consulted Mr. Mills, who is now acting as an interstate commissioner. As the outcome, the opinion of the Attorney-General on certain points is being obtained, and immediately it is received you will be advised of the decision."

TRADE WITH THE EAST.

COMMISSIONER'S SUGGESTIONS.

In a despatch from the commercial commissioner in the East, relative to the marketing of New South Wales goods to better advantage, to the Premier, Mr. J. B. Suttor states:—"During the last 14 years I have frequently drawn attention to the necessity for Australian houses to run Australian goods. Hitherto our efforts have been confined to small shipments, which are usually retailed by other merchants or vendors who stock goods from other countries. To make a success of the business the marketing of our products must be organised on a large scale, with depots at every important centre, and controlled by live agents acting in the interests of the central commercial organisation in Australia, and who will act not only for Australian goods, but also for Eastern goods required in Australia. By this means producers in Australia will sell or act through the general organisation in Australia; and interested importers in Australia can do likewise through the Eastern agents of the Australian head organisation. By this means a community of interests at all markets will be worked up, and by so doing more satisfactory prices will be commanded for both buying and selling and freights.

"The business is too great for any one firm or individual. What we must do is to place the whole of the dairying interests in Australia on a sort of mutual co-operative basis or organisation, then establish depots at all milk-consuming centres where large stocks will be held and controlled by agents under the direct control of the milk-producing people in Australia—such agents to act as wholesale agents only, selling only to established retail vendors, who will handle only Australian milk—or other vendors who make it their business to sell milk by the case or on commission to other vendors in scattered places, but not in competition with other vendors of our milk in larger towns.

"The same organisation could stock and market all other dairying products, such as butter, cheese, and bacon; and for the East depots could be established at Manila, Hongkong, Shanghai, Kobe, or Yokohama, Weltevreden (Batavia), Sourabaya, Rangoon, Calcutta, Bombay, and Ceylon, with sub-agents—by arrangement—at other likely centres.

"A large organisation should be formed in Australia by a combination of all the millers who will act, if necessary, through the commercial department proposed by the Commonwealth Government: the procedure then to be somewhat on the lines of the American millers."

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

The Eastern markets were again cabled easier yesterday. Tapioca was down about /4 per cwt. Distributers reduced their prices by 1/ per cwt, quoting medium pearl at 34/ and seed at 23/ per cwt. Spices were unchanged at the centres of production. Linseed sold in parcels at £20 a ton. The difficulty in exchange with Calcutta still obtains. Coffee was at very high rates, Indian specially so high that buyers would not do business.

All lines of groceries were inquired for, but parcel business was of the smallest dimensions. All were buyers, and few were sellers. Olive oil was inquired for. Holders wanted 27/6 a gallon for Italian oil, but even at that price some would not let go. South Australian olive oil was quoted by the crushers at 22/ f.o.b. Adelaide, subject to crop. Kensitt's oysters had inquiries, with buyers at 10/. All herrings were scarce. Fair supplies of salmon were on spot, and were going out freely. The Lenten trade is in full operation. Speculators were still buying up safety matches. Australian were worth 5/, and best Japanese the same price. Swedish had a little business at 5/6. Stocks of methylated spirits seemed to be small. All who have to do packing of any description are finding difficulty in obtaining containers. Bottles are now quite an item. Twines yesterday were in strong demand, the asking price for 12-ounce being 18/6 to 20/ a dozen. There were still essences on the markets, but pastes were scarce, some brands being quite out of stock. All patent foods were fast diminishing. As each shipment of tinned mustard arrives speculators endeavour to get hold of most of it, because when the November orders are fulfilled no more in time will be allowed importation. Asparagus was quoted yesterday at very high rates, 1lb tins at 15/6 per dozen and 2lb at 27/6.

Buyers were busy with cream of tartar. Up to 3/6 was asked. These purchases must be in anticipation of next season's requirements. All demand for the present season's requirements are at an end.

Woolpacks had a little business at 4/10 slings for season's shipment. February-March shipment had business at 5/3 slings. Lots on spot were worth 5/4½. All lots of branbags from a steamer discharging were cleared, and quotations were advanced to 9/4½ ex store. Cornsacks had business at 9/4 for season's shipment. This price is being accepted by re-sellers, and is below the Calcutta quotation. There are some operators who will not buy just now. They want to know whether there will be any alteration in the fixed price. The present fixed price would allow them no profit on a buying price of 9/4 slings. The Commonwealth Prices Commissioner will open his inquiry in Sydney on Saturday into the cornsack position. What is wanted equally with the determination of the future price of sacks, and a knowledge of who sold above the fixed rate, is some information as to why the cornsacks were not brought in sufficient quantities from Calcutta in time for the harvest.

The Commonwealth Prices Board notifies that advice has been received from Melbourne that the price of broken glass in all States has been fixed at 30/ a ton. The rate will come into operation on February 18.

PIG SALES.

At the abattoir auction yesterday 1222 pigs were penned. A good clearance was made, as the supply fell short of requirements. The percentage of prime-quality porkers was only moderate, plain descriptions being well in evidence. Again the number of baconers comprised a small proportion of the supply, with an increase showing in backfatters. A full attendance of the trade was present, and backfatters and baconers maintained late high rates, and choice porkers met brisk competition, with a substantial rise in price. Medium condition porkers also shared in the improved market.

Quotations were:—

Best backfatters to £8/12/; good weighty, £7 to £8; good, £6 to £7; medium, £5 to £6; light, from £4. Baconers, best to £5/10/; good, £4/8/ to £5/5/; medium, £4 to £4/8/; light, from £3/7/. Porkers, best to £3/5/; good, £2/12/ to £3/3/; medium, £2 to £2/10/; light, from £1/10/; small, from £1/2/.

MELBOURNE SHEEP SALES.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

In the live-stock market to-day 25,000 fat sheep were yarded, with rather a better supply of good to prime sorts. There was a good attendance of buyers, and the market was fairly active throughout, and though prices for prime wethers were hardly up to last week's best rates, for the greater part of the day no decided change in values can be quoted until near the end, when the demand became irregular and values receded at the close. Graziers bought freely, and secondary sorts were generally weaker all day. Quotations: Crossbred wethers, prime 33/ to 40/, extra to 41/6, odd lots to 50/, good 29/6 to 32/, seconds 23/ to 28/, inferior from 21/; crossbred ewes, prime 21/ to 24/9, extra to 27/, odd ewes to 50/, good 26/ to 29/6, seconds 20/7 to 24/3, inferior from 12/; merino wethers, prime 29/ to 32/11, extra to 36/, good 24/9 to 28/, seconds 21/ to 23/3, inferior from 14/9; merino ewes, good to prime 19/9 to 25/, extra to 27/, low-conditioned ewes from 8/6. Fat lambs: 10,200 were entered, of which a good proportion were good to prime quality, the bulk yarded being shorn. SHIPS AND FOOD.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Every word that the Hon. T. Waddell says about the pusillanimity and procrastination of the Federal Government regarding the shipbuilding scheme is justified. We are to-day, and will be after peace is proclaimed, in bitter need of these phantom ships.

Nevertheless, the present desperate condition of the Allies as regards food supplies cannot be helped in the least by any shipbuilding programme, however energetically it be embarked upon. Food is wanted, not six or twelve months hence, but now. Lord Rhondda's message to Mr. Hoover was: "Send us wheat at once, or we may not be able to carry on."

The Americans have responded nobly to the call. In order that the Allies may be fed the people of the United States are accepting meatless and fatless days, and are cutting down their bread consumption to a minimum.

Our response in Australia is, up to the present, nothing. The Minister for the Navy begins by stating that it is impossible to spare any more ships off the Australian coast because, forsooth, if more are commandeered the industries of Australia will be disorganised.

Admiral Clarkson struck a more patriotic note at the Melbourne conference, when he said that it was a scandal that we should be living here in luxury when the people of the Allies were starving, and that we must take every ship we could to carry food to them. But the outcome of this conference was not action, but a request to the States for further consideration, and the war will probably be over before anything is done.

Had I been Prime Minister of Australia when Lord Rhondda's message came through I should the same day have despatched a cable to President Wilson—"We will land 40,000 tons of wheat and 10,000 tons of sugar in San Francisco two months from date. Please send corresponding amount to Europe." I would have also sent wires and wireless messages to the captains of every vessel on the Australian coast capable of carrying 1000 tons of cargo and sufficient coal for the voyage to this effect:—"Proceed to nearest port, discharge cargo, and report at Melbourne or Sydney to load wheat."

The red-tape person will exclaim in horror: "Such a procedure is unthinkable." I would reply: "Something far more drastic was brought about by a union secretary last August, and the Australian people accepted the hold-up as a matter of course. Every ship on the coast was paralysed, while my suggestion would affect only about one-third of them, and would leave the railways untouched."

I wonder did the French Government, when the Italian line was broken, spend weeks in discussing whether it would be possible to utilise the French railway lines to carry British and French reinforcements to the sorely stricken Italian armies?

Did the French Government say: "We are afraid we cannot spare these lines because our civil population will be upset if we rush the reinforcements over these railways?" I trow not. Everything else was brushed aside in this dire emergency, and so it should be here. The matter of possible inconvenience or temporary hardship to the Australian people should not be considered for a moment. The only question is: "How soon can we get the food away?"

Let the Federal Government act with courage and decision, and they will find that the Australian people will be behind them all the time.

I am, etc.,
RICHARD ARTHUR.

MINING.

Active support was forthcoming for mining shares on the local Stock Exchange yesterday. All sections came in for some attention, and a generally buoyant tone ruled throughout the day. Copper propositions, with the exception of Hampdens, displayed appreciable advances. Westonias were brighter, and, following the decision at the Edna May Central meeting, whereby pumps are to be installed, the three favourite stocks figured at enhanced prices. A strong market continued for Barriers, and for most stocks higher prices were paid. British were bought heavily at up to 40/3, an advance of /9 on the day. "Hills" moved up to 62/9, and Norths were 1/ better at 63/. Tin stocks attracted only moderate interest, and prices were somewhat irregular. Mammoth Molybdenite sagged to 15/11½.

NORTH SYDNEY TRAGEDY.

At the City Coroner's Court yesterday, Mr. John Jamieson, J.P. (Acting City Coroner) resumed the inquiry into the death of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Smith, which occurred at the Mater Misericordiae Hospital, North Sydney, on January 6.

Mr. Kidston appeared for the Crown. Mr. H. E. McIntosh was present to represent Charles Alfred Smith, the husband of deceased, who has been charged with having feloniously slain his wife; while Mr. J. J. Carroll appeared for the relatives of deceased.

Charles Alfred Smith, examined by Mr. Carroll, stated that he did not make a practice of drinking, and at no time did he encourage drinking in his home. On Friday, January 4, there was no quarrel between himself and his wife; they went to town and spent a happy evening. There had been no quarrel between them since Christmas.

The Coroner stated he was satisfied that the general conduct of the husband towards his wife had, in very trying circumstances, been most forbearing. He had no hesitation in saying that he placed the utmost reliance on the evidence of Smith, as to what took place during the struggle between himself and his wife.

A verdict of accidental death was returned.

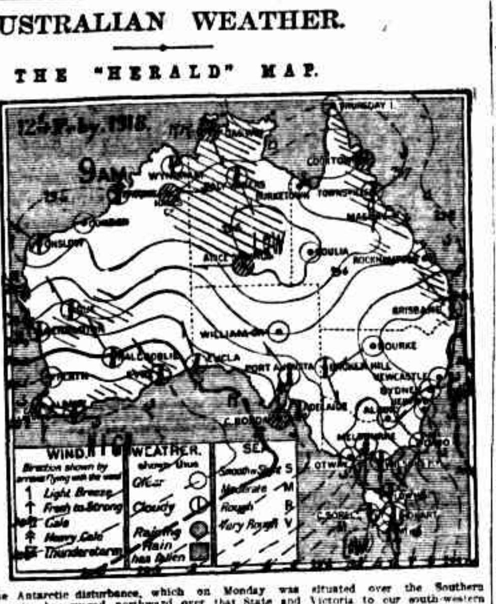
AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.

As shown on the chart, the pressure systems are still travelling considerably above the average rate, but on this occasion in various directions. The "high" which was just showing on the far west coast, has made easting over the southern shores of Australia to about Robe, and its centre (30.2 inch isobar) is situated over the Western Bight. As a result of the co-operation of this "high," with the northern disturbance, unsettled and stormy conditions are being experienced in Western Australia, and, indeed, over most of the tropical regions; strong winds reaching gale force at places are fairly prevalent in the western State, and rough seas are running in the ... The centre of the tropical disturbance has worked eastward to Western Queensland, but unfortunately data being absent from there, no idea can be gained as to the intensity of the weather conditions. But about the base of the Peninsula, Cardwell had 667 points, Tennant's Creek in the Territory had another 287 points, and unsettled to showery weather still persists in that region.



The Antarctic disturbance, which on Monday was situated over the Southern Ocean, to the SW of Tasmania, has surged northward over that State and Victoria to our south-western districts. This has assisted in intensifying the heat conditions over the south-east States. Further development of a heat wave followed the stagnation of the eastern "high" pressure between New Zealand and Central New South Wales. This "high" has also gained considerably in energy. This, the northerly winds influenced from tropical parts resulted in heat-accumulation in our State, and many high temperatures were recorded. Menindie registered 115 degrees, and numerous other places considerably exceeded 100 degrees. But now this hitherto stationary "high" shows evidence of moving eastward, thus permitting the other systems to resume their interrupted easting. With these conditions the hot, sultry weather should culminate in scattered rain and thunderstorms, contracting to the NE, and give place to an advancing cool, equally strong southerly change, which would be responsible for considerable reductions in temperature, and later disturbed sea on the coast, with wind probably attaining gale force. A disturbance of cyclonic nature is now situated between New Caledonia and the New Hebrides, but is passing eastward.

Ocean Forecast.—Strong southerly to gales east of Borda, extending to the coast of New South Wales; indications of storm off the north-west coast of Western Australia; equally south-east on south Queensland coast.

LET ME SAVE YOUR TEETH

Don't let any dentist talk you into having out a tooth that may be saved. I specialise on Crown, Bridge, and Pivot Tooth Work, and I know that I DO NOT PULL ONE TOOTH where less efficient skill takes out hundreds.

A tooth has to be exceptionally bad if I cannot save it, either with gold, amalgam, or what is becoming increasingly popular—my invisible fillings.

Every day some former patient drops in to congratulate me on the consistency of my practice. People for whom I have saved teeth eight, ten, and twelve years ago and more, and who find these saved teeth as sound and as good to-day as when they left my chair.

I claim that no plate work excels mine, but I advise plates only when better results cannot be accomplished with my exceptional crown, bridge, and pivot tooth work, or when the teeth, through neglect, are too far gone to be saved by either gold, amalgam, or my increasingly popular invisible fillings.

ADVICE FREE.

Call and see me at your early convenience. You are at liberty to accept or reject my advice as such. I will not advise anything for you that I would not suggest for myself if I were in your position. All operations, extractions, etc., absolutely painless.

GET THOSE DEFECTIVE TEETH PUT RIGHT AT ONCE. CALL TO-DAY.

and the tenant recognises the fact.

The occupier may improve the property and make it more valuable,

BUT NOT FOR THE TENANT.

We have for years urged inquirers to build, with the result that those who purchased cottages from us a few years ago have now Bungalows and Cottages worth from 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. more than they paid for them, and we do not see how prices are to be lowered for many years.

Terms often arranged for owners of suburban land.

CHEAP CASH REGISTERS

are dangerous. They can be bought from firms or dealers who have no special incentive to be scrupulous, and who have no reputation to maintain.

You should be suspicious of any Cash Register offered by a firm or dealer at a "bargain" price. Either it is badly repaired, out of order, antique, or not in good demand.

Better stick to the original makers. We have a reputation to maintain. We buy and sell Second-hand Registers that are worth having. Dealers are welcome to the others, which they offer as "bargains."

Inspect our genuine offers first. You will get honest service and real value.

HOUSES AND LAND FOR SALE.

BE UP TO DATE.

HABERFIELD GARDEN SUBURB.

This suggestion is more important than you think, more particularly when it applies to private residential property. Your home must be an investment—which implies that you should get a good price for it WHEN you want to sell.

Unless your Home is so modern and up to date as to make a direct appeal to the other man, your chances of realising are limited. We do not infer that all Haberfield residents buy purposely to sell at a later date, but we do claim that the distinction and up-to-dateness of the present bungalows will be hard to excel.

INSPECT THE NEW £1075 BUNGALOW

This is quite the latest. In handy position, standing in a good allotment of land, this Brick Cottage, with slate roof of handsome design, contains drawing, dining, breakfast rooms, spacious bedrooms, kitchen, wide verandahs, all offices. Price is only £1075.

We can arrange terms to suit buyer. Interest is the lowest, and cash can be paid at any time. We are at your convenience on any day. Our advice is free, and we shall esteem it a pleasure to show you over the Suburb this afternoon, or any day that will suit you.

PROFESSIONS, TRADES, ETC.

LADIES.
WE WANT YOU TO GET THESE POINTS
Don't read and let them trickle from your brain like water from a duck's back.
NAIL AND CLINCH THEM FAST TO YOUR MEMORY.
TODAY, with several hundred thousand pounds' worth of CONFECTIONERY stopped from coming to your shores, YOUR CHANCE to make money is greater than it was 20 years ago, when we started teaching. WE are also in a better position to instruct. Our family has grown up with the Lolly Business, and NOT ONE OF THEM was allowed to teach unless they had made ONE WORLD ROUND TRIP, visiting Wholesale Works. Foremost of these works will tell you that has ever visited them to buy recipes and information,
EXCEPT CROAKER'S FAMILY.
The world now boasts many instructors, mostly grown from CROAKER'S INSTRUCTION. Of their respective capabilities YOU must be the judge, but rest assured
NOBODY TEACHES OUR COPYRIGHTS No. 200795.
We have seen it claimed that THEIR chocolates dry in one second. WE CANNOT DO THIS with ALL our experience. Others decry "USELESS DECORATIONS." Then we burst forth and tell you that "ARTISTIC CONFECTIONS" that please the eye, as well as the palate ARE THE SALEABLE COMMODITY, so that you are easily in a quandary.
WHEN IN DOUBT FOLLOW THE CROWD.
Judges who know awarded our pupils
1st PRIZES IN 3 ADJOINING STATES IN 1917.
This is solely because our recipes are the results of thinking men who have oodles and oodles of brains. BUSINESS KNOWLEDGE is your most CHERISHED POSSESSION. Let us transfer OUR business knowledge to you.
WE TEACH FREE.
Before you part with a penny,
WITH FREE MATERIAL,
with the sole object of proving to you our sweets are preferable by following the recipes only.
POST-TAUGHT PUPILS EXCEL.
WE NEVER SEE THEM,
but send materials and necessaries FREE, CARR. PD.
WE MAKE EVERYBODY FINANCIALLY COMFORTABLE.
COME AND SEE US, OR WRITE.
A. CROAKER and DAUGHTERS, Station House, 720 George-street, Sydney, corner Rawson-place. City 10779.

LADIES. 10,000 FITTIES.
IT'S TEN THOUSAND FITTIES, Mr. CROAKER, that you do not have this truly MAGNIFICENT DISPLAY in the heart of the City in some window, said several ladies this week, or words to that effect or
I NEVER SAW SUCH CONFECTIONERY, was a very common saying.
LADIES PLEASE NOTE.—We cannot show in a shop, our lollies are such,
THEY CAUSE A CROWD.

THE IMPORTANCE OF GIRL-POWER
While military authorities are considering the vital necessity of man-power, commercial men are realising the importance of girl power.

We specialise in training girls to occupy good positions in the business world.
STOTT AND HOARE'S BUSINESS COLLEGE ANNUALLY TRAINS AND PLACES IN GOOD POSITIONS OVER ONE THOUSAND GIRLS.
This is convincing testimony to the value of our training.

WHAT IS THIS?
Does it not strike you as conclusive evidence that after offering £100 Reward to anyone who has a Remedy other than my own (which no one has claimed) for the Total Destruction of Superfluous Hair, there are no other remedies? And that it is immaterial what you buy, it is useless as far as Superfluous Hair, and their destruction, are concerned. No one has accepted my challenge, nor has one of the thousands of clients treated by me claimed the reward because "their hair has grown again." This must forcibly impress on you that there are no other permanent cures only Electrolysis, which must be done by an experienced person.
